York Countians Pursue Ethanol Initiative

Informational Meeting Slated

DAVE LEFEVER

YORK (York Co.) — In an effort to "preserve the farmer" and boost the local economy, agricultural and economic development leaders from York County and the surrounding area are teaming up to explore the possibility of bringing an ethanol production plant to the region.

Penn State cooperative extension, the York County Economic Development Corporation (YCEDC), and a new agricultural steering committee have announced that an informational meeting for the York County Ethanol Project will be conducted here next Wednesday.

Spokesman for the project and former extension agent Tony Dobrosky said that the ethanol initiative grew out of a countywide coalition of farmers and business people.

The effort aims to join economic developments in York County with agriculture — the "largest industry in the county" — to help farmers stay in business.

"We have been preserving farms, but what about preserving the farmer?" Dobrosky said.

The possibility of an ethanol plant in York County was first suggested in January this year at a joint meeting of the YCEDC and the county's Agricultural Economic Development Alliance, according to Dobrosky.

David Carver, president of YCEDC, responded to the suggestion by setting out to explore

Flower Trials Draw Visitors To Landisville

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — "Quite White" trailing petunia, in front, followed by "Famous Pink" and "Famous Lilac Vein" varieties greet about 300 greenhouse growers and floriculture industry representatives from Pennsylvania and surrounding states Tuesday here at the Penn State Southeast Research and Extension Center. Rooted trial cuttings of petunias, impatiens, geraniums, strawflowers, and new plants such as "Bacopa" were on display. The 900 varieties provided by 16 different suppliers were examined for their commercial properties to appear on retail shelves next season. Guided tours of the trials were conducted by cooperative extension service representatives Alan Michael and Rob Berghage, and a plant disease update was provided by Gary Moorman, Penn State plant pathologist. Pesticide credits were available at the meeting, in addition to trade industry information. Photo by Andy Andrews, editor

Producers And Ag Businesses: It's Time To Get On The Map

DAVE LEFEVER

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A new Website called AgMap has been created to help the agricultural community connect with consumers and suppliers across Pennsylvania.

The Website, now online at agmap.cas.psu.edu, will become fully operational this fall. At that time, producers and businesses will be able to enter their name, location, and product information onto the system by following a few simple steps, said Rick Day of Penn State Land Analysis Lab.

Extension personnel from across the state are being trained to assist people who want to enter their farm or business on the system. Those without computers will simply be able to visit their local extension office to get on the map, Day said.

Consumers can use the map to search for local commodities and get information on the products as well as the farms and businesses that produce and sell them.

Day called the map "a tremendous marketing tool" that

SUMMIT STATION (Schuylkill Co.) — Judge David Castrogiovanni summed up the overall quality of dairy animals at the Southeast Pennsylvania Championship Holstein Show here Tuesday in one word: "phenomenal."

About 90 animals were exhibited by owners from Berks, Chester, Cumberland, Dauphin, Lancaster, Lebanon, Northampton, and York counties.

Because of the consistent high quality of the Holsteins in the ring, Castrogiovanni at times had to deliberate for longer than usual before calling the places.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
August 22, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Minimum changes in grain bids today but soybeans lower. Wheat steady to 3 cents higher Corn 1 cent higher to 1 cent lower. Sorghum 1 cent higher. Soybeans 2 to 8 cents lower. No news in the corn or wheat pits to make buyers or sellers anxious to change their positions. Light overnight export wheat purchases offered some support to higher wheat bids Corn bids were narrowly mixed as improved foreign interest offered some strength. The corn crop is pretty much made. Rains may help some late corn fill out a little better but picking is already underway in the deep South and leaves have turned color half way up the stalk up into the northern Corn Belt. Drought areas are rather limited this year but acreage down. Light export bookings of beans and meal were reported. Showers keep popping up throughout the country to keep soybeans green and pods filling out on increased acreage planted this year.

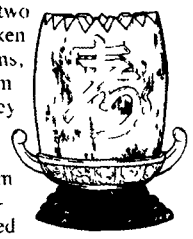
The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC — THIS WEEK WITH

AUGUST 27–SEPT. 2, 2001

FULL BARLEY MOON, SEPT. 2

MANDARIN MÉLANGE

On August 29, 1896, in New York City, the chef to the visiting Chinese ambassador, Li Hung-chang, created a Chinese-American dish that he hoped would help establish new bonds between the two countries. Made with bits of chicken or shrimp, along with mushrooms, bean sprouts, water chestnuts, bamboo shoots, and onions, chop suey was traditionally served over rice. While chop suey doesn't exist as a dish in China, it takes its name from the Cantonese "tsap seui" (or "tsa-sui" in Mandarin), meaning "mixed pieces." In recent years, a simplified American version of the dish has evolved using ground beef and noodles, making American chop suey a favorite children's meal.



They who seek only for faults see nothing else.
–Fortune cookie message

TIP OF THE WEEK

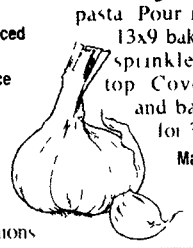
To make lettuce or celery crisp, place it in cold water with a few potato slices.

AMERICAN CHOP SUEY

8 ounces ziti or elbow pasta
2 cups lean ground beef
1 cup onions, chopped
3 tablespoons olive oil
1/2 cup celery
8 ounces mushrooms, sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
15 ounces spaghetti sauce
1 teaspoon oregano
salt and pepper, to taste
4 ounces mozzarella

Cook pasta for 5 minutes, drain. Saute beef and onions in oil. Add celery, mushrooms and garlic and cook 3 minutes. Add sauce and seasonings and mix with pasta. Pour into greased 13x9 baking dish and sprinkle cheese on top. Cover with foil and bake at 350°F for 35 minutes.

Makes 6 servings



The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Fair the first of September, fair the entire month.

Lancaster Farming

Miles Of Copy

We've learned how fragile our hold on life can be, with the death early this week of former and longtime Lancaster County Extension Director John Schwartz, who contributed what can only be measured in the miles — of copy, that is. His contributions to Lancaster Farming can't go unnoticed.

A half generation of readers participated in his work, with John's weekly dedication to writing Now Is The Time (he never missed a deadline). His contributions to our story-gathering, providing story tips, allowing us to attend countless Penn State gatherings, informing us of important happenings, and the untold way he influenced how we gathered the news . . . it's a Herculean task, at least, to recall all he has done for the editorial staff and readers of Lancaster Farming.

I remember John mostly for the countless Penn State Poultry Health and Management Seminars, still ongoing almost monthly, at Kreider's Restaurant in Manheim. Of course, John was instrumental in helping us cover the Poultry Progress Days seminar every March in Lancaster, in addition to the long-past Northeast Poultry Conference, and in past Poultry Sales and Service Conference meetings at Penn State. He also contributed Poultry Pointers columns for our paper.

I remember attending a Lancaster Cooperative Extension banquet a few years ago when John was still extension director in Lancaster. As part of his duties, he addressed those in attendance. He recited numbers — I seem to remember something about how many people attended the meetings and the number of articles about cooperative extension, many of which appeared here. It was then I realized how much extension meant to our paper, how critical their work, and his work, was to ours.

One final thought: what stands out most about John was that he was one of the few people I knew who began and ended a meeting right on time. He was a stickler for timeliness — this made a perfect match for his "Now Is The Time" contributions.

We're proud to be able to honor him mostly for his work as columnist, for his countless editorial contributions to Lancaster Farming, and for his contributions to farming in general.

Now Is The Time

By Leon Ressler

Lancaster County Extension Director

To Remember John Schwartz

Agriculture lost a friend and enthusiastic supporter when Dr. John Schwartz passed away unexpectedly August 20. John worked tirelessly to promote agriculture. Virtually all of John's adult life he served in a number of assignments with Penn State Cooperative Extension.

John Schwartz

He began his career working on the extension staff in Adams and Chester counties and later served as a regional poultry agent. He was known by many for his efforts during his 10-year tenure as Lancaster County extension director, including writing this column. John was very committed to youth development and strongly supported the 4-H program.

In recent years John shared on numerous occasions with this staff the importance of balancing work and family commitments. I respected him greatly for demonstrating this in his own life when he stepped down as Lancaster County extension director, a position he loved and fulfilled with all his energy, to the take the director position in York County. Since John lived in York, this change allowed him to spend more time with his family. Sadly he only had several months to enjoy this extra time at home. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to his wife Kathryn and children Katie and John.

John also served in numerous capacities at his church, Advent Lutheran Church in York. He served as usher, senior high Sunday school teacher, Christian Education committee member, and finance committee member.

Brent Landis, agricultural services manager for the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce, worked closely with John and shares the following memories: "John joined the agriculture committee of The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce & Industry in 1991. John served with a strong devotion on the agriculture committee for nearly 10 years. He was a major contributor to nearly every sub-committee during his tenure, including the formation of the Farm Business School, Family Farm Days, Clean & Green regulations, nutrient management legislation, Agriculture Industry Banquet, township agriculture education, and the 'Lancaster Farming Facts' brochure, along with many other areas.

"John brought dynamic leadership to the agriculture industry in Lancaster County. His extensive knowledge of almost every area of agriculture, complimented with his personal approach, made him a strong consensus builder among people. John was always the person I turned to when facing a difficult decision or when searching for wisdom for future planning. His opinion was highly respected by our agriculture community.

"He was always very involved in the ag community's outreach and education. John loved to put on a chef's hat and make omelets for the Chamber's Board Farm Breakfast. During Family Farm Days, you would find him with the chick-hatching display, educating children about a newborn chick."

Tom Stouffer, president of Lancaster Farmland Trust, also worked closely with John and shares the following comments: "John Schwartz became a trustee of Lancaster Farmland Trust in December 1994. In 1996 he was elected secretary and joined the executive committee. From December 1997 until the end of November 2000, he was chairman of the board of trustees.

"I believe John's leadership during his entire period of board service was instrumental in keeping the organization's focus on preservation as it related to the needs of Lancaster County agriculture. John's approach to problem-solving always took into account the wants and needs of the people involved or affected. This was more than just organizational political savvy. Rather, John cared about others, and he always sought solutions that respected others. He was unafraid of controversy, yet he spoke ill of no one, and he facilitated realistic conflict resolution. Similarly, because he understood organizations, he appreciated the challenges and opportunities of the day-to-day business activities of the Trust. When he spoke, we listened carefully, and usually heeded!

"John was a strong advocate of farmland preservation. He often pointed out that Lancaster County could be the next Los Angeles County if it did not emphasize the permanent stewardship of its fertile farmland. He supported our efforts at the Trust, and he used his influence to support the growth of county and state preservation programs. As much as any other single individual, I believe he was responsible for bringing farmland preservation into the mainstream of Lancaster County agriculture.

"John was my mentor. He educated me in the ways of agriculture, particularly in Lancaster County, and he assisted me in my role as leader of the Lancaster Farmland Trust staff. I always sought his advice and insight, and he never let me down. I am one of very many who will sorely miss him."

Jim Shirk, with Penn Ag Industries and the Poultry Council, remembers John's tireless efforts on the behalf of that industry. "The poultry growers and processors in Pennsylvania have been especially fortunate to have John's dedication to their industry. John was a catalyst for distributing and creating knowledge plucked from research around the world that had a positive impact and a practical application for our poultry industry. His personal mission to improve poultry efficiency and profitability resulted in an annual Poultry Progress Day, monthly poultry health seminars, and attending countless association meetings that kept growers on the leading edge of production technology, food safety, and environmental stewardship.

"With his sharp eye for economics and politics, John advised the poultry industry on how to maintain a balance of profitability and community involvement that will keep the industry viable for generations to follow. We will truly miss his insight, vision, and passion for poultry as we move into the future he has helped us to see."

John served as my mentor as well for the last 10 years. His encouragement and investment in my life were major factors in my decision to accept the invitation to follow in his footsteps as Lancaster County extension director. He presence and encouragement will surely be missed.

The Bible Speaks

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

STILL TIME!

Background Scripture:
2 Kings 17:1-23.
Devotional Reading:
Exodus 20:1-16.

Many years ago, while I was teaching a confirmation class, a teen-ager told me he was confused about sin and forgiveness. There were times when he sought God's forgiveness, he told me, but he didn't feel forgiven because he still was paying the consequences of his sin.

Lots of people, I believe, share this young man's consternation. Confessing and repenting our sins does give God the opportunity to give us the most important gift we can seek of him: forgiveness, the restoration of our relationship with our Creator. But that doesn't mean that because we are forgiven the situation is magically repaired. Sin causes other consequences: the damage to ourselves and others. God does not promise to cancel the consequences.

If we have sinned against another person, God will forgive us if we repent, but we may end up with a ruptured relationship that may never be healed. If we drive too fast and have an accident that cripples another person for life, God's forgiveness does not automatically set aside the tragic result of our carelessness. Sin costs dearly!

Natural Consequences

That is what the people of Israel found — too late and the hardest of ways. Their humiliation and virtual extinction at the hands of the Assyrians were the natural consequences of the willful, arrogant lives they had been living.

The writer of 2 Kings tells us of Hoshea, the King of Israel, that "he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, yet not as the kings of Israel who were before him" (17:2). It is a curious passage, because the writer says that he was sinful, but not as sinful as most of the kings who had preceded him. I don't know if Hoshea would have taken comfort in knowing that he was not the most evil king of Israel, but it was a dubious distinction.

The bottom line is that Hoshea, while not the most evil king, was evil enough to bring terrible consequences upon the northern kingdom. Sargon II, the King of Assyria, says that he carried away into captivity 27,290 inhabitants of Israel who were scattered in faraway places. History lost track of these people and the ten tribes are often referred to as "the ten lost tribes of Israel." The name of the land changed from "Israel" to "Samaria" and Israel disappeared from world history from that moment on, 722 B.C.

We can feel sorry for them and regret the final outcome, but we can see that they brought these terrible consequences on themselves by arrogantly living and worshipping in the customs of the pagans whom God had subdued. Again and again, God had sent them prophets and the plainest possible warnings: "Turn from your evil ways and keep my commandments and my statutes . . ." (17:13,).

Time To Repent

God was giving them an opportunity, not only for forgiveness, but to escape the terrible consequences that lay in wait for them.

"But they would not listen, but were stubborn, as their fathers had been . . . They went after false idols, and became false, and they followed the nations that were round about them" (17:14, 15). Worst of all, they indulged in the sacrifice of their own children — with the best of intentions, of course . . .

It is hard to believe that a people could be so headstrong and rebellious. Of course, they didn't see themselves that way, just as today people would be shocked to see themselves categorized that way. "Therefore the Lord was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of his sight; none was left but the tribe of Judah only" (17:18).

So, at least there was Judah. The southern kingdom of David could profit by the intransigence of Israel. They could — but they didn't: "Judah also did not keep the commandments of the Lord their God, but walked in the customs which Israel had introduced." It would take another 136 years for Judah to go the same way as Israel, but in 586 B.C., Judah also was humiliated and carried into captivity.

Why didn't these people ever learn? Why don't we — while there is still time?

FARM FORUM

enced the lives of so many others.

I write from the perspective of colleague, "boss," and friend of one that I have grown to respect and appreciate more each year. Usually, as I write these letters, I review agents' personnel files. In John's case, this 7-inch file review has left me overwhelmed with how to capture the many accomplishments and activities of his life. It has also brought peace and comfort in the documentation of a life so gallantly and fully lived.

One of the early news clippings in the file contains a photo of a very happy John and Kathy Schwartz with Katie (then 3 years old) and John (then 4 months old) on the day of John's appointment as county extension director (CED) in Lancaster County. Nearby in the file is a copy of John's first "Now Is The Time" Lancaster Farming column written as the new Lancaster CED on May 11, 1991. Other than a change in his eyeglass frames, John's appearance has stayed virtually the same over the years.

In the article, John graciously credits his predecessor and then goes on to dispense information on safety and the value of farmer/neighbor relations. These were common themes throughout John's work as were composting poultry, egg quality assurance, egg marketing, ventilation and the environment, land use and assessment, poultry promotion, and farmland preservation. In more recent years topics have included risk management, Clean and Green, Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program, and "Will Lancaster County be the next Los Angeles?" John not only disseminated this information in Lancaster County but in numerous professional meetings and journals around the nation and in foreign countries.

John was not a "jack of all trades," rather he was a master of many. John devoted his life to the job of improving others' lives in industry, production agriculture, and in urban and rural communities.

Many notes of thanks also fill the file. There are notes of thanks to John for providing leadership for a National Extension Technology Conference, involvement in internal review committees, leadership on regional and state committees, Farm Show leadership, youth events, and hosting international agriculture visitors as well as USDA leaders and state and federal legislators.

John was always a gracious and proud host. He was full of facts and figures and made certain that visitors left with a strong appreciation of the agricultural prowess of Lancaster County and the capitol region. One of his favorite illustrations compared the agricultural production statistics in Lancaster County to other states. John was an articulate, poised, and confident spokesperson on many critical issues.

Also found in the file are notes of excellent performance. In a fairly recent administrative review, the staff that he supervised rated John as "exceeding expectations," which is quite a compliment from one's colleagues. Staff appreciated his open-door policy and interest and his support of them personally and in their extension program. And in a few short months, as CED in York County, John had already begun making important linkages with the York extension staff and the agricultural community.

Though not reflected in the files, my personal conversations with John often revolved around his interest in the Civil War, our joint interest in organizational leadership, good books to read, the joys and challenges of parenthood, and the struggles of achieving the appropriate balance of our work and family life. John's recent career change to county extension director in York County was based on the love of his family, the chance to be with Katie and John more during their teen years, to be home with Kathy and the kids for dinner and more family time, to contribute to his church and his home community in York, and to take on new career challenges and provide leadership to York agriculture. It was a tough decision, and the more challenging road to choose.

John was a passionate leader, as evidenced by the many e-mail communications with extension administrators at all levels. Much of the correspondence reveals John's commitment to ensure and clarify policy and procedures, advance new ideas, state and support his opinion on emerging issues, and often to express his gratitude to others. There are a few examples when we didn't agree, but I can say we always valued and respected each other's opinions and found some common ground.

John served as a critical member of our capitol region leadership team: a willing contributor and dedicated worker. And now, because of John's death, I find myself contemplating new leadership decisions, asking myself what John would have thought, and missing his input that he so generously contributed.

The capitol region's leadership team is a special group of leaders who have articulated a theme of "Honoring Traditions, Pioneering Change." However, one does not have to consult the files, but rather the many people in Lancaster and York counties, the capitol region, Penn State University, the poultry industry, and local and state governments to know that this theme has been epitomized by the life and work of our colleague, leader and friend, John Schwartz. His legacy will live on in the people he has touched. And I am most grateful that John Schwartz's life journey intersected with mine.

Oklahoma Feeder Cattle Weekly

Oklahoma City, OK
August 22, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Oklahoma National Stockyards - Weekly Cattle Summary: Compared to last week: Feeder cattle and calves steady to 2.00 higher. Demand very good for front-end feeder cattle and all calves, demand moderate for second and third grade feeder cattle. Quality of supply continues plain to average. Weigh conditions average to full. The COF report had no ill effect on the market. Numbers of light weight placements saved the report from a negative tone. Good clearance from feedlots last week made way for some replacement cattle. Spotty August rains gave calf buyers a boost with hope for a better wheat season than last years bust.

Receipts this week 6935; last week 9333; last year 10,482. Supply consisted of 72 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 21 percent calves and light yearlings under 600 lbs; 7 percent cows and bulls. Heifers comprised 31 percent of feeder and calf supply.

Prices follow with weighted average weight and price in parenthesis.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State

Aug. 17, 2001

Butter Prices Keep Rising

- Grade AA butter reaches $2.09.
- Cheese prices steady.
- July milk production down 1.2 percent.
- Dairy stocks a surprise!

It was a busy week for reporting! The milk production and cold storage reports were released. The results are mixed and paint a picture of a market searching for direction. At the moment, that direction is for higher prices. However, the data also had a few surprises.

First, let's review the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Block cheese prices remained steady at $1.72 per pound. Barrels, however, declined from $1.65 per pound on Monday, Aug. 13, to $1.63 by Friday, Aug. 17. One shouldn't read too much into that. It could be that the market was a bit long on barrels this week.

Butter prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange offered a surprise. Grade AA butter rose from $2.05 per pound on Monday to $2.09 by Friday. The cheese and butter prices are odd when one compares them to USDA's Cold Storage report released last week. Butter stocks at the end of July were 145.4 million pounds, up 6.2 percent over a year ago. Butter production through June of this year was down over 8 percent relative to a year ago.

What's going on here? Well, the combination of fewer cows, reduced production per cow, and summer heat has made butterfat scarce. That has raised both wholesale and retail butter prices. That in turn has lowered the consumption of butter, thus raising stocks.

The bigger question is whether butter stocks are going to continue to grow because of reduced retail consumption. If they do, and milk production rebounds just a bit, look for butter prices to take a nose-dive sometime this fall.

USDA's Cold Storage report had just the opposite message for cheese. Stocks of American cheese at the end of July were down 19.7 percent. Total cheese stocks were down 16.9 percent. Through the month of June, production of American and Total cheese was down 4.8 percent and 1.6 percent, respectively. Unlike butter, cheese consumption must be holding up fairly well give these low stocks numbers. That explains why cheese prices are so firm.

USDA released the milk production report. Milk production in July for 20 major dairy states was down 1.2 percent over a year ago. Production totaled 12.1 billion pounds. Production per cow averaged 1,555 pounds in July, down 6 pounds over a year ago. And cow numbers for 20 major states in July was 7.75 million head, even with June 2001.

The futures markets at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange attempted to digest all of this market information. As of Aug. 17, the Class III futures rose from $15.55 per CWT for August 2001 to $15.60 for September 2001. Thereafter it fell to $13 per CWT by December 2001. Class IV futures on August 17 rose from $14.95 per CWT for August 2001 to $15.50 for September 2001, falling to $13.60 by December 2001.

The market is anticipating that there will be some milk supply response by the end of the year. Clearly the milk supply has been tight in August because of the heat and humidity. September milk will continue to be tight as children return back to school. But what if we assume that cow numbers remain level through year-end, and that milk per cow rebounds 2 percent over a year ago starting in October? Milk production for 20 major states will be 1.5 percent ahead of a year ago by December. What do you think this will do to the milk price?

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
Aug. 17, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER CATTLE SUMMARY - Week ending Aug. 17, 2001. Receipts this week 167,000; last week 152,300; year ago 164,200. Feeder cattle prices rebounded a bit from last week's lower prices on the calves, but yearlings did not fare as well. According to USDA's Livestock and Grain Market News Service, calves mostly steady to 2.00 higher with some classes of calves up to 5.00 higher in the Southeast. Yearling cattle were quoted mostly steady to weak, with some direct sales as much as 2.00 lower on slow country trading.

The Southern Plains are just now starting to see some moisture falling from the sky. Many are wondering what it is; they haven't seen any rain in so long. Spotty rains occurred over last weekend and a front moved through that dropped widespread showers this week and gave the area a much needed break from hot, humid weather. As those in the Southern Plains move toward September, wheat and rye pasture planting is just around the corner. It appears that the weather pattern moving through has left much optimism about getting crops to sprout and grow quickly. Already arid states in the Northwest are seeing more wildfires erupting after lightning strikes; starting underbrush afire and the situation is growing out of hand quickly. Many ranchers sold their calves 30-45 days early due the severe drought conditions in the Plains.

Direct feedlot sales took back what was lost last week as live sales were quoted 1.00 higher at mostly 70.00 and dressed sales 2.00 to 3.00 higher at 112.00-113.00.

This month has been interesting as CME's August Live Cattle futures have been trading near a 2.00 premium to the cash trade. For the true hedgers, it seems the conditions are in their favor to deliver. As of Thursday evening this week, month to date total loads tendered came to a sum of 366. Some in the industry are calling 366 only a moderate number at this time in the delivery month. Hedgers are keeping their eyes on the fall and winter Live Cattle futures as they hover in the middle 70's.

Today's bearish Cattle on Feed Report pegged inventory at 107 percent. Placements were 104 percent, mostly to blame for this is the drought conditions in the South that forced grass cattle to depart early. The marketing number of 99 percent also weighed on the inventory numbers. However, this was the most positive number in the report as it was toward the high end of industry guesses.

For the month of July, slaughter numbers under federal inspection averaged only 659,000. Chain speed will need to be increased to get some of the excess fed cattle moved into the food chain. This week's reported feeder supply included 43 percent over 600 lbs.

Eight Breeds Exhibited At Kutztown Dairy Show

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Of eight breeds on display here Aug. 16, a 3-year-old Jersey cow shown by Trevor Cammouf emerged as supreme champion dairy animal.

"There are times when cows showcase themselves in their wedding clothes and this cow is doing it today," judge Dan Carroll said of Cammouf's "Celeste."

Cammouf manages a milking herd of about 50 cows, including about five Jerseys, on the farm he grew up on near Mohrville. He started the operation three years ago.

After his parents had retired from dairy farming in the mid 1980s, Cammouf said he "always knew he wanted to get back" in the dairy business.

Following are results for each of the eight breeds in the youth and open shows:

Red And White Dairy Cattle Association Convention, Show, And Sale A Success

CRYSTAL SPRING (Fulton Co.) — The Red & White Dairy Cattle Association (RWDCA) announced success in convention attendance, quality show entries, and sale results of the Shenandoah Summer Hummer Sale, hosted by the Southeast RWDCA on July 18-20 in Harrisonburg, Va.

Grand champion female of the open show was bred by Dale Bendig of Gettysburg, and is coowned by Richard Green of Middletown, Del.

New directors and the association's officer team were introduced. New board members included Paul Lawrence of New Castle, Pa.; Dana Erway of Coudersport, Pa.; and Deb Lundy of Jefferson, Wis. Introduced as the re-elected officer team was Edward Peck, president; Kathy Cook, vice president; and Joan Carpenter, secretaryreasurer.

Livestock awards presented at the banquet included the 2000 All-American Awards, Premier Breeder and Exhibitors of the show. The Albrecht Memorial Scholarships recognized one junior member Nick Conro of Hampshire, Illinois — with a scholarship.

Bill Hughes of Mount Solon, Va. was honored as this year's recipient of the Albrecht Distinguished Service Award, the recognition instituted in 1989 in honor of Don Albrecht to honor exceptional service and support of the Association and Red & White cattle. Bill Hughes is known for his tireless dedication to promotion of the Red & White breed, particularly through his encouragement and helping hands to the youth of the association.

The top-selling animal at the sale was LJP Johnson Reddie-Red-ET, a 4-year-old cow with an excellence classification. Reddie was consigned by Louis Palmatary and Sons of Church Hill, Md., and sold to Dean Boelk of Wisconsin for a final bid of $5,300.00.

The Red and White Dairy Cattle Association was founded in 1964 to promote the breeding and development of Red & White dairy cattle and has been located in Crystal Spring, Pa. since 1975. The Association is based on the principle of an open herdbook. There are now over 120,000 animals registered in the herdbook and 800 members in the association.

Brandt's Hog Tops E-town Championship — Again

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — For the second year in a row, Lynn Brandt captured the grand champion swine trophy at the Elizabethtown Fair.

Tuesday evening, Lynn, 16, daughter of Dale and Lynette Brandt, Middletown, exhibited her 258-pound Blue Butt, champion of the heavyweight division.

Reserve champion went to first-time champion exhibitor Erin Willard, 15, daughter of Brian and Julie Willard, Lawn. Erin exhibited her 243-pound hog, a Hampshire/Duroc crossbred, winner of the light heavyweight division.

Lynn, a junior at Lower Dauphin High School, obtained the gilt from Bill Brown, Hershey. She said she selected the champion pig because she "liked its muscling and frame," she said. She has help from her father, Dale, in making the decision.

Show judge Dave Holloway, Glen Rock, who also judged last year's Elizabethtown Fair hog show, said the heavyweight winner is a "combination of things I really like in a nice, neat package."

During the championship drive, Holloway noted that he is looking for a wide hog, "with rib in it, that will grow on feed, and has the length of body and structural soundless and clean through the front end and has eye appeal," he said. "That a lot to get accomplished. You can spend a lifetime trying to get that accomplished."

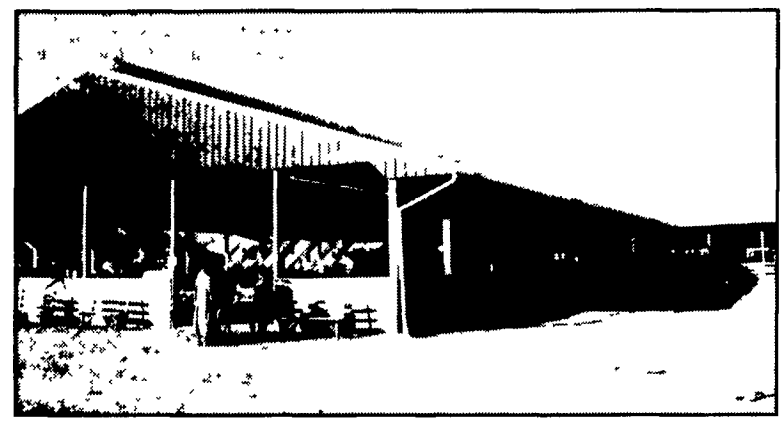
Reserve winner Erin Willard, a sophomore at Palmyra high School, exhibited the crossbred hog, "Shaniqua," to her first championship at the fair. She said she exercises the hog, which "kind of tears around" sometimes.

Holloway commented that the hog, when it won light heavyweight champion, shows "the muscling and balance we need and the width we like."

Showmanship first-place honors were awarded to Sarah Graybill, Nicole Kreider, Joel Geib, and Amy Brandt.

There were 61 hogs and 38 exhibitors, the first hog show under the new exhibition building that completed construction this month at a cost of about $160,000. Two new buildings provide about 12,000 square feet of show space.

Following is a list of show placings.



Elizabethtown Fair's new adjoining exhibit buildings provide an additional 12,000 square feet of space. Construction was just completed this month at a cost of about $160,000.

Jersey Chosen Supreme Champion At Bedford Fair

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — "Each cow here represents her breed well," said judge Jeff Reasner as the seven dairy cows, each already a champion, were led in to the ring for the Supreme Champion show.

Remarking on the good udders and great feet and legs of the 9-year-old jersey owned by Keith Fisher and shown by Chriselle Fisher, he pronounced her the supreme.

The Fishers live on a farm in New Enterprise and are no strangers to the show ring. The previous week they took home both Supreme and Reserve honors from the Morrisons Cove Dairy Show with the Jersey and a Holstein.

Reserve grand at the Bedford Fair went to Aaron Gable and his Guernsey.

A check and a banner was presented by Agway to the Fishers. Gable received a banner and check from Bilger's Breeding Service.

Other champions in the ring included Ronnie Morse and his Holstein; Ashley and Kristen Fisher with their Milking Shorthorn; Brants Homestead and their Ayrshire; Ray Mowry Sr. And a Red and White and Nick Burket with his Brown Swiss.

MANAGING CROPS IN A SEVERE DROUGHT

Del Voight
Agronomy Extension Agent
Greg Roth, Associate Professor
Penn State Dept. of Agronomy

Many areas of Pennsylvania are experiencing a severe drought. Corn growth has stopped in many areas and in the worst areas, corn fields are beginning to dry up.

Other grain and forage crops are drought-stressed as well. Although we can do little to change the weather, we can make some management decisions now to help minimize losses and salvage as much from a bad situation as possible.

Some key questions that silage and grain producers should consider are listed here.

• What should be done now? There are several things that should be initiated immediately. The condition and yield potential of the crop should be assessed. Dairy and livestock producers may want to collect a forage sample to assess moisture, forage quality, and nitrate levels. Grain farmers may want to begin identify ways to market their crop as silage. All producers should check with their crop insurance or FSA representative before harvesting the crop.

• What is the yield potential of the field? This will be variable, depending on the severity of the drought. For corn fields that are losing leaves and not unrolling at night, the yield potential will be likely low — from 0-50 bushel per acre or so. For fields that have a good stand and are exhibiting leaf rolling only during the day, there may still be good yield potential if the drought is broken soon. Even many of these fields have lost a significant amount of their top end yield potential, perhaps 50 bushels per acre or more, if conditions would be perfect until the end of the season.

• When should you decide to salvage the crop and harvest for silage? When leaves cease to unroll at night and the tops start to brown out, the plants are probably not going to recover. As browning of the crop continues, the forage quality will decline as the plant uses stored carbohydrates in the leaves and stalk to sustain itself. Producers should probably consider harvesting it for silage. Delaying harvest will reduce yield and quality and reduce the potential for planting a second crop. The moisture content may be higher than desired, so a dry feedstuff such as chopped ear corn or hay may need to be to adjusted for silage moisture and energy for good fermentation. If the forage is extremely wet (greater than 75-80 percent), harvest should likely be delayed. No definitive guidelines are available, but I would suggest that if half the leaves are dead or dying, it would be a good candidate for evaluating for silage harvest.

• What is the yield potential of this type of crop? A rough estimate of wet (70 percent moisture) silage yield is about one ton per foot of height of corn without ears or poorly pollinated ears. This estimate may be high on very short (1-3 foot tall) crops.

• What kind of silage will this crop produce? This crop will likely be higher in protein than normal silage and lower in energy. A ballpark estimate of silage quality might be an NEL of 0.60-0.64 and a crude protein of 9-12 percent. Some preharvest forage testing may be appropriate to assess the quality, the level of nitrates, and the potential use of the forage. If it were to rain, fields that have some recovery potential could produce some good quality silage. In these drought-stressed crops that recover, the ear to stover ratio will be good and the fiber digestibility is usually high.

• Are nitrates a concern in this kind of crop? Yes. The potential is greatest for high nitrate levels in young plants, especially in the stalks and especially in heavily manured fields. The potential is generally greatest for three to four days following a drought-ending rain, but can be a problem anytime. High nitrates can contribute to animal feed problems and deadly silo gas. Producers should be especially cautious when filling silos with these suspect crops. Nitrates can be reduced by leaving a 12-inch stubble in the field — this would reduce yields, however, and may not be advisable unless a forage test confirms the presence of nitrates. Because the nitrate potential can be reduced through ensiling, grazing and green chopping drought stressed corn are less desirable harvesting alternatives.

• Is it worth harvesting these crops? On some fields, it may be a toss-up. The variable costs such as fuel, labor and repairs associated with chopping a light corn crop are in the $15 to $25 per acre range, so if producers can harvest at least one ton of silage per acre valued at perhaps $20 per ton, they will break even. To achieve this yield may require corn about two feet tall.

• What should grain producers be assessing? Grain producers in the worst areas may need to be identifying silage markets for their crop. This will help to alleviate potential feed shortages and provide a market for drought-damaged corn crops that will produce little grain. They could also be considering plans for establishing other fall forage crops — there may be a significant market for these crops this fall.

• What crops are a potential for replanting following corn? This will depend on the herbicide program used for corn. Generally, sorghum-sudan grass may be the most viable option if planting can be achieved by early August. Small grains or soybeans are also alternatives in some situations, but the dry weather may make atrazine carryover high, which will damage the more sensitive crops such as oats and soybeans. Check herbicide labels for replanting restrictions. If corn fields are unsatisfactory for planting fall forage crops, producers may want to consider no-tilling into small grain stubble fields — although these soils may be hard until it rains again. Call the extension office for copies of raising alternative crops, which will detail seeding rates and how to properly establish the different crops.

Dairy Producers Receive Stakeholders' Pacesetters Award

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Jobo Holstein Farms, L.L.C., Gettysburg, Adams County, and Tom Craig, Murmac Farms, Bellefonte, Centre County, were recognized by the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders with the organization's prestigious Pacesetter Award at the Ag Progress Days dairy producer luncheon.

The two dairy operations are the third and fourth recipients of the award, which was created last year to recognize individuals and organizations who have contributed significantly to creating a positive image of the Pennsylvania dairy industry. Up to three Pacesetter Awards can be presented annually to nominees who excel in the following criteria: visionary, innovative, progressive, excellence of performance, and unique.

"Both Murmac Farms and Jobo Farms have pursued their visions to develop progressive dairy businesses and become leaders in our industry," said Ralph Heffner, chair of the Pacesetter Award committee. "They truly exemplify the characteristics of a Pacesetter and are extremely worthy candidates of this award."

Jobo Holstein Farms, L.L.C., is a partnership between John and Bonnie Hess, their children Josie Riser and John Hess, and their son-in-law Dale Brown. They milk 500 cows, farm 900 acres, and provide custom forage harvesting and TMR blends for area producers. The Hesses have been recognized as Master Farmers, conservationists and leaders both in the industry and in the local community.

Since purchasing the farm in 1970, John and Bonnie have farmed with a vision of building a business to include the next generation. They've worked with dairy consultants and other experts to expand the herd and operation. They've adapted new technology and practices to build a productive and progressive operation.

Last year their vision became a reality when they formed the partnership with Josie, John and Dale. John and Bonnie share a passion for farming and agriculture, and they've passed on that passion to all five of their children. The five children and their spouses work in some part of the agriculture industry.

The Hesses also share their passion for farming with other dairy producers and with young people from all over the world. Along with hosting tours and educational meetings for fellow dairy producers, the Hesses have hosted international exchange students as interns on their farm. Each year they invite more than 200 local elementary students to tour their farm. The Hesses have also welcomed local 4-H members who don't have homes for their dairy animals to keep their animals at Jobo Farms.

Tom Craig also shares his passion for agriculture and farming with others. He got his start in the dairy industry in 1979 as a herdsperson at Murmac Farms and took over the operation in 1980. Through the help of a mentor and business partner and the advice of experts both within and outside the dairy industry, Craig has grown his dairy to 800 milking cows. The operation is now positioned to provide business opportunity for his and his wife Sherry's family.

What sets Craig apart from other dairy producers is his enthusiasm for the dairy industry and his willingness to share his insight, experience, successes and failures with others. Craig has provided Penn Staters with internships and job opportunities on his farm. He has also hosted classes and informal discussions with students. He is a member of the Executive Committee of the Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania and has played a key role in developing that organization.

According to Lisa Holden, a dairy professor from Penn State who nominated him, "Craig sets the pace for the dairy industry and provides the encouragement for others to follow him."

Craig has created a very positive and business-like image of dairying on his farm. He uses an outside advisory team and has developed comprehensive protocol for his employees to follow. When he decided to hire Hispanic workers on his farm, he provided his family and existing employees with Spanish classes and his new Hispanic employees with English lessons. Craig is truly a visionary and progressive thinker, and he has developed himself as a leader for his organization and the whole industry to follow.

Both Craig and the Hess family were presented a gold-plated clock commemorating the Pacesetter Award during the Ag Progress Days luncheon. According to Heffner, the award was created as a way to recognize the dynamic leadership responsible for creating a strong and rewarding future for the Pennsylvania dairy industry.

The Pennsylvania Dairy stakeholders will recognize up to three recipients throughout the year, so qualified nominations can continue to be submitted to the board of directors for consideration. To receive an application, contact Alan Bair, facilitator, Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders, at (717) 948-6328 or nab4@psu.edu.

Metzler Receives Service Award

Lehman Metzler

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster Mennonite High School agricultural science teacher Lehman Metzler recently received the Years of Service Recognition Award for serving the agricultural education profession for 30 years.

The recognition, sponsored by the Pennsylvania FFA Foundation, was given as part of the Pa. Association of Agricultural Educators Conference conducted at Penn State University this summer in conjunction with the Pa. Governor's Institute for Agricultural Science Careers.

Metzler also recently received the Youth Adviser Award for "exemplary leadership and service" to the National Institute on Cooperative Education (NICE) Youth Scholar Program. This summer he served as a youth adviser during NICE's 73rd annual conference, conducted in Atlanta, Ga.

Metzler, of Willow Street, is in his 22nd year of teaching at Lancaster Mennonite High School. At LMH he is co-adviser, with teacher Christopher Ochs, of the Hans Herr FFA Chapter, which has enjoyed numerous successes since its inception in 1992.

During the 72nd annual Pa. FFA Convention mid-June at Pennsylvania State University's main campus, the Hans Herr Chapter's outgoing president, Paul Hostetter, was named president of the Pennsylvania FFA Association. Paul's classmate, Jeremy Ranck, was named eastern region vice president of the state FFA Association. Both were graduated from LMH in June.

In addition, the school's Agribusiness Management Team took first place and received $1,000 to compete in the National FFA Convention at Louisville, Ky., in October. The Ag Mechanics and Dairy Foods teams took home second place awards, both receiving $450 to compete nationally in the Northeast Regional Career Development Event at the BIG E (New England Expo), Springfield, Mass., in September.

Prior to his position at LMH, Metzler served nine years in Central and South America in Adult Ag Extension Education.

Deadline Approaching On All-American Dairy Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes reminded all dairy breeders that the entry deadline for the 2001 All-American Dairy Show is approaching.

"If anyone has not entered their prize-winning cow into the All-American, I would like to encourage them to do so. This is another banner year at the All-American. I hope to see everyone in Harrisburg in September," said Hayes.

All entries for the 2001 All-American Dairy Show need to be postmarked by Sept. 5 for the second entry deadline and sent to the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex.

The All-American Dairy Show continues to exemplify its mission of having the best dairy genetics on display. The dairy cattle that will be on display in Harrisburg have traveled from across the nation, several having received national recognition in milk production, type quality, and dairy genetics.

To recognize the high quality of cattle on display at the All-American, the show will pay some of the highest premiums in the nation.

Building on the investment from the year 2000 with the increases in the premiums for the champions of each breed receiving $1,000 and the supreme champion being paid $3,000, this year the All-American will increase the premiums paid to the reserve grand champion, intermediate champion, and junior champion of each breed to $200. To recognize a herd's dairy type excellence, the Exhibitor Herd Class winner will receive $500.

Breeding productive cattle takes time and commitment from breeders. To recognize their efforts, the All-American will increase premiums for the premier breeder award to $500 and the junior and senior best bred and owned of each breed to $200.

The 38th Annual All-American Dairy Show will be Sept. 22-27 at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex, Harrisburg. For more information or a premium list, contact the All-American Dairy Show at (717) 787-2905.

York 4-H Livestock Champions Selected

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

BAIR (York Co.) — A heavy pig, showing a long, lean torso and hams reminiscent of truck fenders bested the competition at the York 4-H summer livestock roundup to take champion honors for exhibitor Randy Wilson.

"Heavy hams are the trend of hogs in the West," said the industry-knowledgeable, 10-year-old New Freedom lad who has raised 10 pigs for this year's lineup of shows. The champion crossbred gilt earned Wilson's his first roundup champ title and topped his reserve honors from a year ago.

Hatfield Quality Meats, Hatfield, once again supported the youth program livestock sale with the purchase of several of the roundup hogs, including their $400 final bid on Wilson's 267-pound champion. The roundup sale followed the show conducted Aug. 13 at the county's 4-H Center.

Following in the sale lineup was veteran swine exhibitor Lane Innerst, Red Lion, offering up her weight-matched champion pair. Hatfield was again final bidder, with a $250/per head bid on the 232 and 231-pound crossbreds.

Lindsay Jones, East Berlin, took reserve grand champion swine honors, with a crossbred Blue Butt pig. Buyer of the 239-pound reserve winner was Double-D Roofing, York, enhancing the college fund of the soon-to-be Middlebury College, Vermont, freshman psychology major.

Kurt Long's reserve champion pair followed, with Hatfield making the $150 final bid on each of the 222- and 223-pound pink ribbon winners exhibited by the Airville 4-H member.

Sibling Kim Long exhibited the 230-pound champion lightweight, which sold for $180 to buyer York Building Products Company, York.

Russell Wilson, New Freedom, took reserve champion honors in the heavyweight division. His 251-pound entry sold for $160 to Godfrey Brothers Meats, Loganville. Wilson also exhibited the runner-up lightweight, with Hoke Mills the buyer of the 226-pound pig.

Reserve champion medium weight was the 240-pound entry of Jessica Innerst, Red Lion. Windsor Meat Market bought the winner on a $200 bid.

Swine showman age class winners were Lane Innerst, 16-18 age class and champion showman, with age class runner-up Lindsay Jones named reserve champion showman, Jessica Innerst, 13-15 age class champion, Tasha Flory, age 11-12 class champion and Andrew Bankert, 8-10 class.

The total 68 head of swine averaged $213.63 per head, including the champions, and $210.63 without the champion price.

LAMB ROUNDUP

The lamb roundup, held in conjunction with the swine judging, turned into almost a family sweep for the Emenheiser brothers of Felton, who snagged four of the 10 six awards. Credit for the fine show of lamb winners was attributed by the Emenheiser siblings in part to a ram which sired several of their top contenders.

Randy Wilson's long, meaty entry snagged grand champion honors at the York roundup and went home with $400 for the winner from buyer Hatfield Quality Meats.

York's 4-H lamb roundup turned into a family affair when brothers Joe, left, Jacob, center, and Jeffrey Emenheiser snagged overall reserve champion, grand champion, and lightweight division honors.

Heading up the family of champion honorees was 14-year-old Jacob Emenheiser, whose homebred crossed-Suffolk wether got the judge's nod as heavyweight and grand champion of the show. First through the lamb portion of the sale, the 124-pound winner sold to Peoples' Bank, York, on a $150 bid.

Joe Emenheiser, 18, claimed the runner-up champion spot with his 114-pound medium weight lamb, which sold to Richard Morgan Contracting, York, for $150. Emenheiser, a livestock judging team member, can put his earnings toward the freshman animal science studies he will begin at Oklahoma State in a few weeks.

Jeffrey Emenheiser, 10, stood just behind his brother in the heavyweight classes, taking the reserve champion weight division title. Peoples' Bank was winning buyer on the 128-pounder, which sold for $150.

Reserve champion lightweight honors went to Lindsay Jones, 18, East Berlin. Her 87-pound lamb brought a winning $210 bid from Lease's Auto Body and Paint Specialists, East Berlin.

Bonus bids on several of the lambs were made to add to the final price for exhibitors by Rishel's Landscaping Service, Seven Valleys.

Taking showmanship honors in the lamb roundup were Joe Emenheiser and Lindsay Jones, 16-18 age division and champion and reserve champion overall, respectively, Cody Ault, 15-year division, Brandy Bankert, 13-14 age division, Jeffrey Emenheiser, 9-11 age group, and Andrew Bankert, 7-8 age group.

A total of 36 lambs, sold by the head, averaged $196.25 with the champions, and $198.97 without the champions.

Penn State Cooperative Extension Capitol Region Dairy Team

CLOSTRIDIUM ENTERITIS IN DAIRY CATTLE

Dr. Arlen Mills
Extension Veterinarian
Capitol Region

I received a call to visit a farm which had lost several cows because of a "new cow disease," and the producer wanted to know what and where this disease had come from and how to prevent it. This followed on the heels of several phone calls about the same problem on other farms.

What producers had been seeing was the sudden death of cows in lactation or of dry cows ready to calve. Some would just be found dead, not having been noticed to be sick and others would die after being off-feed for 12 to 24 hours. An autopsy had been performed on several of these cows and the lone finding was a small area of small intestine containing clotted blood.

Arlen Mills

What has been causing the death of these cows is a disease syndrome called by various names including "jejunal hemorrhage, hemorrhagic enteritis, and dead gut disease." It is characterized as a disease which affects high-producing cows in high-producing herds. It appears, at this time, that the problem is caused by a combination of an infectious agent, Clostridium perfringens type A, and various management factors.

Clostridium perfringens is of the family of organisms that grow in low oxygen situations and is closely related to the organisms which cause tetanus and the disease called "Black leg." The organisms are commonly found in the soil and like to grow in poorly fermented silages or forages put up too wet. So the bacteria is fairly common in the cow environment, at least in low numbers.

Death results when high numbers of the bacteria are coupled with various other management factors. Some of these factors which have been identified are the presence of haylage in the ration, high levels of carbohydrates in the form of starch in the ration, and poor gut motility related either to low effective fiber levels or hypocalcemia. Others have experienced cow deaths during the feeding of corn silage which has been removed from bunker silos before proper fermentation has had time to occur. High levels of sorting of the ration in the feed bunk has also been linked to the disease in several situations.

If a producer sees that this disease may be a problem in the herd, there are several steps which may be taken to slow or halt the losses. Check rations carefully, looking at the individual components that are going into the ration. Pay special attention to items high in soluble or readily fermentable starches. Cutting back on items such as high grain corn silage, high moisture corn, or readily fermentable small grains may be advisable. Prevent conditions which may slow gut motility such as low effective fiber levels and subclinical hypocalcemia. In some herds where the main forage source is haylage, replacing some of the haylage with corn silage has seemed to help in stopping cow losses.

Coupled with these management changes, many producers are vaccinating the cow herd with a vaccine containing Clostridium perfringens Type C & D. There is no commercial vaccine which contains the Clostridium perfringens Type A associated with this disease syndrome. On some farms the available vaccines seems to be helping but others are using an "autogenous bacterin" provided by the herd veterinarian. This is a specific bacterin made by a laboratory from bacteria isolated from a naturally occurring case of the disease. These autogenous bacterins seem to offer more consistent protection, especially when coupled with appropriate management and nutrition changes Losses from this disease have been high on some farms. The first step in disease control is to recognize the problem and then make the necessary changes.

Corn Silage Whole-Plant Dry Down Rates[a]

Glenn A. Shirk, Extension Dairy Agent, Lancaster, Pa.

The rains that fell two weeks ago did a lot to delay dry down rates, but this past week, moisture levels began dropping again. Harvest time for this plot is at hand if filling a bunk or bag, and about a week away if filling an upright. The % firing of the plants did not change much, partly because of the additional top growth of recent weeks.

Remember, one of the single most important points in putting up good quality silage is harvesting at the proper moisture. And, you can't always go by looks or kernel maturity, because they can be deceiving! Plants may look dryer than what they really are, and growers can be fooled into harvesting droughty fields too quickly, especially if the plant still has moisture in the stalk and is still laying down additional dry matter. However, once the stalk starts losing moisture, moisture levels can drop quickly. This year, many fields are quite variable for a variety of reasons, so growers will be forced to make harvesting decisions based upon the average conditions of their fields Also, stalks in the center of many fields are not as well eared nor as well filled out as those in the outer rows. So, monitor field conditions closely and have the chopper ready to roll when situations are near optimum

Seniors Food Program Continues To Grow

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — A state-funded program that began with an $18,000 grant in 1998 has "taken off like a rocket," according to Sam Hayes Jr., state secretary of agriculture, last week at Ag Progress Days.

The Seniors Farmers' Market Nutrition Program (FMNP) has grown from $18,000 funded three years ago to $1.9 million funded for the fiscal year. The program allows seniors who quality to obtain coupons, similar to the Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) Program, and use them at qualified farmers' market to buy locally grown and marketed produce.

Berry Friesen, executive director of the Pennsylvania Hunger Action Center, spoke Wednesday morning at Ag Progress Days during a Joint House/Senate Informational Committee Meeting about his program and the seniors nutrition program.

The nutrition program was introduced in the city of Chester, near Philadelphia, in the summer of 1998. The following year it expanded to the Sharon-Farrell area, and "we began hearing rave reviews from seniors and senior centers," said Friesen.

Speaking about the successful Senior Farmers' Market Nutrition Program at Ag Progress Days, from left, were Berry Friesen, executive director of the Pennsylvania Hunger Action Center; Joyce Rothermel, executive director of the Greater Pittsburgh Community Food Bank; and Duane Perry, executive director, Farmers' Market Trust. Photo by Andy Andrews, editor

Last year the General Assembly added $500,000 to the program. Though the Center asked the General Assembly for a $2.5 million increase, in the end, another $485,000 was added, bringing the total to just less than $2 million.

The additional funds will enable to counties of Adams, Blair, Bradford, Fulton, Tioga, Butler, Dauphin, Lackawanna, Luzerne, Monroe, Warren, and York to begin programs. An additional 24,000 seniors will be able to participate, bringing the statewide total to about 85,000.

"We have a wonderful network of 651 senior centers across Pennsylvania, and these centers are the mechanism by which most of the FMNP checks are being distributed," said Friesen. In Lancaster County, home to 10 senior centers, 15 farmers' markets participate.

For the seniors, spending the allocated $20 per senior "doesn't seem like much," said Friesen, "but the food is fresh, healthy, and delicious. The seniors love it. Going to market is a shared experience that knits folks together and builds community. For low-income seniors, it's almost like a summertime Christmas present."

To qualify, Secretary Hayes noted, a senior has to be 60 years of age or older, with PACE or Medicare benefits, making no more than $15,800 per year (single income) or $21,000 (for couples).

Several people spoke about the need for additional state funding to continue to allow programs such as these to thrive.

R. Duane Perry is executive director of Farmers' Market Trust, a nonprofit charitable organization dedicated to improving access to affordable, nutritious food in underserved communities. Through farmers' markets, school curriculum, and other educational efforts, "we reach more than 100,000 Pennsylvania farmers, children, adults, and older adults in southeastern Pennsylvania every year," he said.

Perry said, "We strongly support the Senior Farmers' Market Nutrition Program. I think Pennsylvania should be very proud that it has led the way, creating this important program. Today, more than 32 states are implementing a federal pilot program based in part on Pennsylvania's model."

He said though the program reaches close to 35,0000 nutritionally at-risk seniors, there are more than 82,000 Philadelphia seniors who are low-income and subsist on less than $16,00 per year. To reach these and every at-risk senior in southeast Pennsylvania, "will require an estimated $4 million of funding for this program," Perry noted.

Also speaking was Joyce Rothermel, executive director of the Greater Pittsburgh Community Food Bank. The bank distributes approximately 1 million pounds of food and grocery products a month through a network of more than 350 local food assistance providers in southwestern Pennsylvania.

The Food Bank, this year, is operating seven farm stands.

Rothermel also spoke about how good the seniors nutrition program is. The redemption rate of the program is more than 90 percent, she noted. Rothermel urged strong, continued support in funding for the program, expanding the program to additional seniors who qualify.

Maryland Grain Checkoff Program To Continue

EDGEWATER, Md. — Organizers of the referendum on the Maryland Grain Checkoff Program were pleased with a positive outcome. Although voter turn out was not as good as expected, the grain checkoff program passed by an 85 percent margin.

The total number of votes equaled 325 with 273 in favor of the program. Eligible voters had to be financially engaged in the growing of grain as a landowner, tenant, or sharecropper.

The Maryland Grain Producers Association had been authorized to conduct the referendum by the former Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Virts. The vote was conducted in County Extension Offices on Thursday, Aug. 2, or by previous absentee ballot, with the official counting taking place on Aug. 7 at the quarterly meeting of the Maryland Grain Producers Association.

Under the authorizing state law, a referendum is required every five years to reaffirm support for the checkoff program.

E-town Fair Posts Beef Show Results

MICHELLE RANCK-KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Elizabethtown Fair hosted its annual beef show Wednesday morning at the fairgrounds.

In the breeding beef show, Adam Zurin's Shorthorn heifer got the nod from judge John Hausner for a grand champion finish.

Adam, 14, has been showing cattle for four years, and sheep since early childhood. Cattle, however, now take up a lot of his "show time" as he has traveled to the Eastern Regional Shorthorn Show and Eastern Nationals in Maryland, the National Shorthorn Show in Ohio, KILE, the Farm Show, and will go to the Maryland State fair to compete. The Zurins have 20 head of cattle at home in Mount Joy.

In her first season of showing cattle Tiffany Bender won reserve champion with her Angus heifer. Tiffany, 13, also has five breeding sheep at home.

The daughter of Dean and Sarah Wehry, Tiffany got involved in showing animals because her younger brother wanted sheep, according to her mother. However when Tiffany tried showing animals she found that she really enjoyed competition, so she purchased a heifer for the show ring and has taken the animal to the Mid-Atlantic Nationals in Maryland, the Beef Expo in State College, the Farm Show, and the Angus Breeders' Show in Huntingdon County.

"She jumped in with both feet," said her mother, Sarah.

Jen Shultz, 11, and "Frosty" took home the reserve champion in the non-selling beef show. "Frosty," a Shorthorn/Maine Anjou cross, was purchased at KILE.

The Shultzes have 25 cattle, mostly Herefords, at home. According to her father the family is breeding Hereford/Angus crosses for commercial or club calf purposes.

She is the daughter of David and Julie Shultz, Dillsburg.

The sale steer division of the market beef show yielded results for sisters Courtney and Caitlin Wolfgang.

Courtney, 14, and her homebred "Batman," a Simmental/Angus/Chianina cross, topped the sale steer classes to be named champion of the division. Courtney, who has already competed at roundup, plans to exhibit at the Farm Show this January.

At last year's Farm Show Courtney was crowned the Simmental queen for Pennsylvania.

One or both of the sisters have exhibited at the Simmental Pennsylvania/Maryland Field Day, the Eastern Simmental Regionals in Indiana, and the Farm Show.

Caitlin and "Joker," her own homebred animal from the Wolfgang's home farm, "Messick Farms" in Middletown, took home reserve champion placing of the sale steer division. The steer is a Simmental/Angus cross.

Caitlin, 11, also shows horses.

They are the daughters of Patty and Brian Wolfgang.

In the dairy beef show Amanda Hersey, 9, Elizabethtown, won reserve champion of the show with "Snowy." She is the daughter of Steve and Heidi Hershey.

Amanda, who hails from a 300-acres dairy farm, also showed swine at the fair. "Snowy" was from another local farm and did well under Amanda's walking, bathing, brushing, and show ring practice, a job which took an hour a day close to the show, said Amanda.

Sarah Daniels, 10 took home champion placing of the dairy beef show.

Sarah scored in her first year in the beef ring with her 4-H project. She exhibited sheep last year and also expanded her 4-H participation to include livestock judging.

Her steer, from "Catalpa Farm" in Middletown, was purchased especially for the project. Sarah has five sheep and her lone steer on the farm.

She plan to take "Lightening" to Manheim Fair to compete. "It's fun if the steer is under control," said Sarah.

She is the daughter of Matt and Gretchen Daniels, Mount Joy.

John Hausner, Dover, judged the show. John and his wife, JoAnn, not only breed Angus cattle and have 75 head at home in York County, but also judge beef shows in Pennsylvania and six surrounding states. Hausner estimate that he judges at 20-25 shows per year.

Elizabethtown Fair Conducts Sheep Show This Week

MICHELLE RANCK-KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Elizabethtown Fair's sheep show, with more than 100 exhibitors, brought out the quality animals which characterize the fair each year.

Classes included up to fourteen competitors in the showmanship classes.

In the breeding sheep show Kelsey Binkley, 11, and one of her seven sheep, a Dorset, took home supreme champion breeding sheep.

She is the daughter of Van and Beth of "Tudbinks Tomatoes Farm," which hosts not only 35 sheep but also 50,000 tomatoes that the family grows for a produce auction.

The Binkleys purchased the ewe at the spring Penn State Reduction Sale, a big event for Dorset breeders, according to her father. The ewe, "Peachy Paterno," is named for the famous ice cream flavor from State College — "and my dad likes that kind of ice cream," said Kelsey.

The ewe also won supreme champion over all breeds at roundup, according to Kelsey. Her long body, good muscling, straight legs and "pretty face," said Kelsey, took her to the top of the class. Her father expects the animal to grow into "a whale of a ewe."

"Exceptional quality top to bottom" marked the market lamb classes, according to judge John Eaton. The heavyweights were "ready and right," and Ryan Donough's heavyweight lamb took home the supreme champion market lamb.

Donough, a senior at Manheim Central High School, and his lamb won over both selling and non-selling market lambs.

His homebred animal, "Stealth," with its long body, caught the judges eye and won the nod for the top honor of the market lambs. The lamb was reserve champion at the 4-H roundup.

Donough, in his tenth year of 4-H, has been showing sheep all of his life. The Donough family, often found competing in the sheep show ring, have 20 ewes and 20 market lambs on six acres at home.

Additionally Donough had the champion ram of the "all other breeds" division in the breeding sheep show along with the reserve champion pair of market lambs.

Adam Zurin and "Chubbs" took home grand champion of the selling market lamb division. "Chubbs" is actually the second name affixed to the lamb, which was first christened "Chili." The animals' weight gain, however, dictated a name change. A little time back in the pasture brought the animal back into show shape and a grand champion placing.

Zurin, who has had sheep since he as five years old, also exhibited cattle at the fair.

Fair Queen Amy Long, 18, a recent graduate of Lower Dauphin High School, handed out the ribbons and crocks to the winners and spent some time in the ring. Long took home the grand champion lightweight of non-selling market lambs placing.

The show was judged by John Eaton of York County, a former 4-Her. Eaton, in his first year judging at Elizabethtown's sheep show, also initiated the new building. The sheep show was conducted in new facilities this year.

Ohio Farm Science Review Exhibit Targets Small Farms

LONDON, Ohio — "If you build it, we will come." At least that's the idea behind the new Center for Small Farms, according to Marti Smith, American Small Farm magazine. This display will be one of the new attractions at the 2001 Farm Science Review, Sept. 18-20.

The Center for Small Farms, which is co-sponsored by the American Small Farm magazine and the Review itself, is "geared toward manufacturing agribusinesses that assist smaller acreage farmers (1-500 acres)," said Smith.

The display will allow Review exhibitors to target small farmers with their information and products, said Craig Fendrick, Farm Science Review manager. Manufacturing equipment and products, new technology, and the American Small Farm Association will be a few of the exhibits catering to the smaller farmers, said Smith.

The 22,500 square-foot exhibit area, which will be located north of Federation Park, will display pieces of small farm equipment. Signs will direct farmers to the dealer's other location in the Review where they can receive more information, said Smith.

The Farm Science Review, sponsored by Ohio State's College of Food, Agricultural, and environmental Sciences, takes place Sept. 18-20 at the Molly Caren Agricultural Center near London, Ohio.

SRBC To Conduct Workshops On Water Resources Planning

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Susquehanna River Basin Commission (SRBC), in partnership with DEP, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Capital Region Water Board, is sponsoring three regional workshops to get additional public comments on the Comprehensive Water Management Plan for the Lower Susquehanna Basin.

The purpose of the study, which is being funded by DEP and the Army Corps, is to evaluate and develop a detailed short- and long-term comprehensive work plan to ensure proper planning for the region's future water needs.

As a comprehensive study, many aspects of water management are being evaluated, including water supply, water quality, flood and drought management, and land use. The regional workshops are designated by counties and scheduled for:

Aug. 28, at Best Western, Gettysburg, for Adams, Franklin and York counties; Aug. 29, at Marriott, Harrisburg, for Cumberland, Dauphin and Perry counties; and Sept. 5, at Hampton Inn, Manheim, for Lancaster and Lebanon counties.

The three workshops will run from 8 a.m. to noon. For more information on the regional workshops or to obtain a copy of the proceedings document from the initial workshop, look on SRBC's website http://www.srbc.net under the Lower Susq. Comp. Water Resources Study or contact Susan Obleski at (717) 238-0423, sobleski @srbc.net.

Ohio Farm Science Review Hosts Farm-Pond Clinic

LONDON, Ohio — Want to get more out of your farm pond? Attend "Ponds with a Purpose" at Farm Science Review. The one-hour clinic will show how ponds work and the best ways to manage them. The goal: To help pond owners head off problems and, in the end, save money.

"For example, we'll discuss how nutrient levels ultimately determine how each pond behaves, what kind of vegetation problems may occur, and how many pounds of fish and what size of fish a pond will support," said the presenter, Bill Lynch, an Ohio State University Extension associate for aquatic ecosystem management.

"A major underlying theme will be preventing pond problems rather than waiting for them to occur and thus incurring considerable expense in correcting them," he said.

The biggest pond problems, at least in Ohio, are filamentous algae blooms, excessive submerged aquatic plants and summer fish kills.

The keys to preventing these problems, Lynch said, are minimizing shallow water and limiting the nutrients that enter the pond.

"A properly managed pond is likely to be a pond in which no mats of algae or duckweed are floating about," he said. "These indicate excessive nutrients."

Farm Science Review is Sept. 18-21 at the Molly Caren Agricultural Center near London, Ohio.

"Ponds with a Purpose" will be conducted each day from 1:30-2:30 p.m. in the Review's Gwynne Conservation Area. The location is the south shore of the Gwynne's farm pond. Shuttles to the Gwynne will leave from the west end of Friday Avenue.

Among the benefits of farm ponds are fishing, swimming, wildlife habitat, and water for crops and livestock.

Lynch, as OSU Extension's primary pond-management specialist, prepares fact sheets and other educational materials, talks with pond owners and county agents, and travels Ohio presenting clinics.

At the Review, he will focus on pond ecology and on setting management goals and objectives.

Also at the clinic site will be "Managing Your Farm Pond: Vegetation and Fish," a display of live aquatic plants plus free pond-management information. Featured will be three new fact sheets — "Understanding Pond Stratification," "Summer and Winter Fish Kills," and "Muddy Water in Ponds: Prevention and Remedies" — prepared and released this year.

Ohio State's 2,100-acre Molly Caren center is two miles north of London on U.S. Route 40.

Admission to the Review is $4 in advance from most Ohio agribusinesses and all OSU Extension county offices, $6 at the gate, and free for children five and under.

Dairy Feeder's Training Workshops Set

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Managing dairy feeding programs for optimum cow performance is critically important and merits special attention to improve cow performance and health.

Penn State Cooperative Extension will be helping producers design and implement systems to manage and control feeding programs.

Through a series of three hands-on workshops, dairy managers and feeders will receive "A Feeder's Kit" to help them achieve optimum performance from their dairy rations.

The first two workshops will be conducted at the Lebanon County Extension Office Sept. 25 and Oct. 2 with the third session planned for Meadow Wood Farms near Lebanon on Oct. 9. Sessions run from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Penn State instructors will include Tim Beck, Jud Heinrichs, Virginia Ishler, Dan McFarland, Richard Stup, and Gabriella Varga.

A feeder's kit will be provided for each farm enrolled and participants will receive instruction on how to effectively use each of the items in the kit during the sessions. The feeder's kit includes:

Optional items (must purchase or bring your own to workshop):

- Microwave oven (add $80).
- Digital gram scale (add $125).
- Particle size separator (add $160).

Included with $135 base registration fee: pH paper, supply list to purchase additional items, flour sifter to separate concentrate feeds, sample pan, calculator, TMR mix sheet spreadsheet, dry matter history spreadsheet, feed cost control spreadsheet, three-ring binder with dairy feeding publications, "From Feed to Milk" videotape, silage preservation videotape, CD, including all materials in binder and software.

Participants should bring a sample of all ensiled forages and a TMR sample to the program. They will have the opportunity to practice measuring forage dry matter, pH and particle size. Measuring, plotting and analyzing particle size data will also be featured.

During the second day's program, participants will examine NDF intake for their herds and demonstrate their understanding of this fiber management tool. A hands-on computer lab will feature two spreadsheets that will help managers and feeders monitor ration changes and help control TMR mixes. The afternoon segment will feature carbohydrate management in dairy rations.

The final session at Meadow Wood Farms will begin with instruction on silage sampling and pH assessment in ensiled forages. Feed bunk observations including the particle size of the TMR, feed refusal and cow observations will be featured. Feeding facilities fundamentals will be taught including bunk issues and design, feeding area surfaces and interactions of nutrition and dairy facilities including air quality, temperature, cooling, cow comfort and cud chewing time.

Base registration fee including the take-home items in the feeder's kit is $135/farm (one feeder's kit included). Participants must bring their own microwave, particle size separator and digital scales to the workshop if they do not purchase them. The fee for additional participants from the same farm is $40 per person to cover meal and refreshment costs. The program is limited to 10 farms so that individual assistance can be provided during the many hands-on activities planned. Registration is requested by Aug. 31, 2001. Full payment of the base registration fee on or before Aug. 31, 2001 entitles the farm to one free additional participant.

To register for the sessions, contact the Customer Service desk at the York Extension Office at 112 Pleasant Acres Road York, PA 17402-9041. Indicate if you will be purchasing the optional items at the time of registration. Telephone (717)-840-7408 or FAX 717-755-5968, or e-mail Tim Beck at tbeck@psu.edu.

"(These animals) can stand a phenomenal amount of competition as they go on," he said of the class winners.

Two animals from Woodbine Farm near Airville in York County took championship honors.

Justin Hall's spring yearling was named champion heifer in the youth division. Christina Knight's senior 3-year-old cow won grand champion of the show.

Hall's heifer was also named reserve junior champion in the open class.

Cousins Hall and Knight are both members of the Airville Milk & Money 4-H Club and help out with the herd of about 200 Holsteins kept on their grandmother Knight's Woodbine Farm.

Knight has been showing dairy animals for about eight years and will be a sophomore this fall at Kennard Dale.

One of the things Knight likes best about going to dairy shows is "meeting new people," she said.

The show posted the following results:

Producers And Ag Businesses

will "increase sales without need for a middleman."

The map should especially benefit small producers and businesses that are located in places less visible to consumers, he said.

Day first conceived the idea of AgMap about a year ago, not only as as a marketing tool for producers and ag businesses, but also as a way to keep track of agricultural trends across the state.

"No one really has a good database of the extent of all the ag businesses in the state," Day said. One of the goals of AgMap is to create such a database.

"We're trying to put all Pennsylvania ag-related businesses on the map," he said.

As part of the World Wide Web, AgMap will help create markets for Pennsylvania ag products and services in other states and even around the world, Day pointed out.

"You could be in Brazil and search for Pennsylvania (products,)" he said.

Day began developing the Website out of a concern for the loss of Pennsylvania farmland and the subsequent loss of ag businesses across the state.

According to Day, although many Pennsylvanians understand that farmland is being lost, the total meaning of that loss is harder to grasp.

"What isn't understood is the ag businesses (that are) being affected," he said. "(AgMap) is a good tool to track the change of land use and all of the supporting businesses."

Day hopes that agricultural information and trends brought to light by AgMap will ultimately be used as tools to affect government policies related to Pennsylvania agriculture by "helping politicians understand the extent of the industry."

At this point, about 150 producers and businesses are entered on AgMap, according to extension associate Stewart Bruce.

Besides gaining exposure to consumers, producers will benefit from the site by being able to locate a wide variety of farm supplies and services — from seeds to consultants, Stewart said. They will also be able to use the map to network with other producers.

For more information on AgMap, contact your local Penn State extension office.

Ethanol Initiative

the possibilities of ethanol production here. He gathered information on the topic, including taking a five-day tour of a Minnesota ethanol plant and visiting another facility in Missouri.

Looking at agriculture as a strong factor in economic development is "a unique idea," according to Carver. To further the partnership between agriculture and development, the YCEDC will soon be hiring an "agricultural economic development specialist," he said.

In the meantime, a six-member steering committee on grain processing for renewable energy has been formed from local grain producers to address ethanol possibilities for the region, including areas in northern Maryland.

Dan Wolf, chairman of the committee, farms some 1,900 acres — including about 1,200 acres of corn — with two brothers near Stewartstown.

"Through the melding of ideas, (the committee) is trying to find what might fit here" in the area of ethanol production, Wolf said. "We have been trying to educate ourselves and have been talking to people involved in processing corn (for fuel)."

The YCEDC and the steering committee have made a proposal to the USDA to secure funds to conduct a feasibility study for the project. According to Russ Montgomery of the YCEDC, any funds approved by the USDA for the study would be matched with funds from local utility company partners.

Montgomery said the USDA is reviewing the proposal.

"We are hopeful to hear something by the end of September" on whether or not the USDA will back the study, he said.

In the event that no federal funds are approved, however, Montgomery said the YCEDC will proceed with the first phase of the study using local funds.

The study would be conducted by an independent company to examine the impact on the surrounding area of such a plant, including whether or not local infrastructure could support it, he said.

Citing 1999 statistics, Mongomery said about 5.1 million bushels of corn are produced in York County and about 82 million bushels are produced in a nine-county area in southeast and southcentral Pennsylvania.

Carver said that the site for the possible ethanol facility would be selected only after the initial phases of the feasibility study are completed — and that site would not necessarily be in York County.

"This plant, per se, doesn't have to be in York County," in order to benefit area farmers, he said.

According to Hanover-area grain farmer and steering committee member Brian Utz, the steering committee would like to see an ethanol plant capable of processing 10 to 12 million bushels of corn per year — enough to produce about 30 million gallons of ethanol.

Southeastern Pennsylvania is a prime location for an ethanol plant because of demand for the product and the proximity of markets where it could be delivered, Utz said.

"Transportation (of the ethanol) is not an issue," he said. "Our markets (would be) within a 50-mile radius of York."

According to Dobrosky and members of the YCEDC, out of approximately 50 ethanol plants in the U.S., only one is located east of the Mississippi River and none are found on the east coast.

Utz said that other marketable by-products from the processing of corn for ethanol include carbon dioxide, corn oil, and dried distillers grain.

A major purpose of the feasibility study would be to determine if enough corn can be produced in York County and the surrounding area to make the plant profitable, Utz said. The next steps would be to draw up a business plan and seek cooperative investment for the facility.

A featured speaker at the meeting Wednesday will be Larry Johnson of Minnesota, a leading state in ethanol production.

As business development manager for a Minnesota manufacturer of ethanol production equipment, Johnson will give a presentation called "A to Z of Ethanol Production."

Earlier this month, the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) applauded a U.S. House decision that defeated the Cox-Waxman amendment that would have allowed California to opt out of reformulated gasoline oxygenate requirements as required by the Clean Air Act.

Ethanol advocates face conflicting reports on the long-term

Lamb Named Supreme Market Animal At Elizabethtown Fair

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — A crossbred Suffolk market lamb shown by Ryan Donough of Manheim was selected supreme champion Thurs. night out of a market group that included grand champion beef, dairy beef, goat, lamb, rabbits, and swine.

A judge representing each species argued their case with the other five judges until the supreme animal was finally selected, said sale manager Larry Poss.

Supreme exhibitor Donough said that muscling and leanness are major points the judges look for in making the selection.

A senior at Manheim Central, Donough said he has been showing livestock for about 10 years, including swine and beef as well as market lambs. He is a member of the Lancaster County 4-H Club and of the Manheim Central Chapter of FFA.

Donough said he enjoys showing the animals he raises at home. "It's fun to be with friends and work with the animals," he said.

He hopes to pursue an education in an agricultural field after graduating from high school next spring.

Andrew Dice's Jersey cow was named supreme champion breeding animal of the fair.

Courtney Wolfgang's supreme champion beef, weighing in at 1,145 pounds, topped the 4-H and FFA auction Thurs. night. Darrenkamp's Meat Market purchased the animal for $2,700. Reserve champion beef brought $1,400, purchased by Hoss's Steak and Sea House.

Stephen Geib's champion goat sold for $1,300 while his cousin Brian Geib's reserve champion brought $600. Manheim Auto auction was the buyer of both.

Lynn Brandt of Middletown and Erin Willard of Hershey sold the top two swine for $950 and $575, respectively. Buyers were Brandt's Farm Supply and Fulton Bank.

Adam Zurin's grand champion market lamb went for $1,000 to Engle Publishing Co. John Tracy's reserve was bought by White Oak Mills for $475.

Each of the top two dairy feeder calves fetched $850. The champion went to Mylin R. Good of Manheim and the reserve to G&G Feed and Supply, also of Manheim.

The two rabbit pens sold for $175 each and were purchased by Larry Poss and Gene's Homemade Ice Cream, respectively.

Ethanol Initiative

feasibility of ethanol as a fuel source.

David Pimentel, a Cornell University energy researcher, reported earlier this month that his findings show it takes more energy to make ethanol from grain than the combustion of ethanol produces.

Adding ethanol to gasoline, however, is touted by the NCGA as a means to decrease dependence on foreign oil supplies, create cleaner-burning fuels, and boost corn markets for farmers.

Carver of the YCEDC also pointed out that U.S. energy policy will increasingly require fuel additives such as ethanol.

"You can produce (gasoline) a lot cheaper, but it produces more pollutants (than ethanol)," he said.

Carver cited large demand for ethanol in the Mid-Atlantic states — at 800 million gallons per year — as another reason to pursue it.

"The technology has already been established," he said. "We think Pennsylvania needs to be a part."

U.S. Department of Energy sponsors various ongoing research projects on increasing the efficiency of ethanol production.

In addition to the informational meeting scheduled for York County on Aug. 29 (see box), other seminars on the topic are slated for Aug. 30 at the Holiday Inn in Grantville, Dauphin County, from 8:30 a.m.to 4 p.m.; and at the Sheraton Hotel in Cranberry Township north of Pittsburgh on Aug. 28 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

For more information, contact Tony Dobrosky at (717) 235-1230, or the York County extension office at (717) 840-7408.

It's A Bird, It's A Plane, It's Beefman At State Fair

WESTMORELAND, N.Y. — It's state fair time again, and along with the fair comes "Beef Day," an annual celebration of the beef industry in the Empire State.

This year's Beef Day, scheduled for Aug. 28, promises to be bigger and better than ever before.

This year, the New York Beef Industry Council (NYBIC) will be introducing Beefman to state fair attendees. Beefman, a cowboy superhero, brings ZIP (Zinc, Iron and Protein) into the lives of children.

"Educating children about good nutrition and the importance of maintaining a balanced diet, which includes the appropriate amount of beef, is a main priority of America's beef producers," said Don Gray, a beef producer and chairman of the NYBIC.

"Beefman is one of the ways in which we can spread the word about beef's bundle of nutrients in an exciting and informative way for kids to gain important information — and have fun doing it."

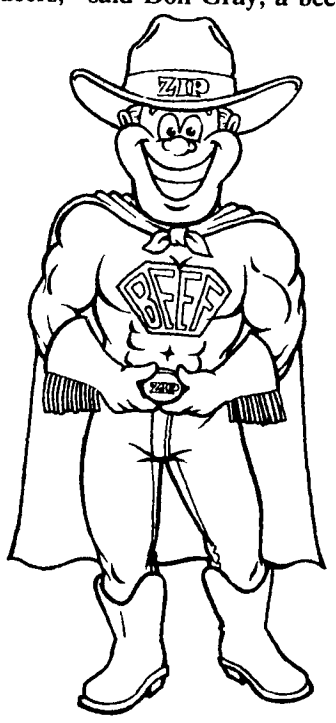
Beefman will meet with children and their parents to take photos and deliver Beefman activity books. He will join fair attendees as they take part in the Beefman Activity Center located in the pavilion at Cole Muffler Court, playing games such as "Pyramid Power" and "Beef Jeopardy."

The festivities will begin at 10 a.m. with the Governor's Proclamation, presented by the commissioner of agriculture and markets, Nathan Rudgers. Following the proclamation, media contestants from Syracuse radio and television stations will be participating in the second annual "Beef Up Your Hero," a sandwich-making contest using fully-cooked beef and veal products.

Last year, Rick Gary of WIXT Channel 9 took home the "Ultimate Beef Hero" award with his Hormel fully-cooked prime rib and Catelli Bros. veal bacon sandwich. Gary will be returning again this year to face even greater competition in an attempt to defend his title.

The "Meals in Minutes" display will again be in the Dairy Products building. In addition to serving samples of fully-cooked beef and veal products, the NYBIC will provide recipes and ideas for heat n' eat meals.

A visit to the newly-built beef barn will provide an opportunity for fairgoers to see a variety of beef breeds and talk with the beef producers. In the Art and Home Center, the American National Cattle Women will demonstrate easy cooking ideas using beef and veal.



The New York Beef Industry Council has a new nutrition mascot. Beefman will make his first appearance at the New York State Fair on Beef Day, Aug. 28.

That's "Good" Business!

Charles Good began a relationship with Penn Jersey when he purchased his first Harvestore® structure in 1972. His son Glenn continues to this day with five Harvestore structures and a Slurrystore® System. The farms are managed by Glenn's sons Dana and Dean. Recently their livestock program changed and their Slurrystore is to be removed to make room for a new heifer raising barn. The Slurrystore was purchased in 1978, processed over 15 million gallons of livestock waste, and was sold for 48% of its original price!

Alpacas Pack Wallop Of Attention

KATHARINE THOMPSON
Alpaca Farm

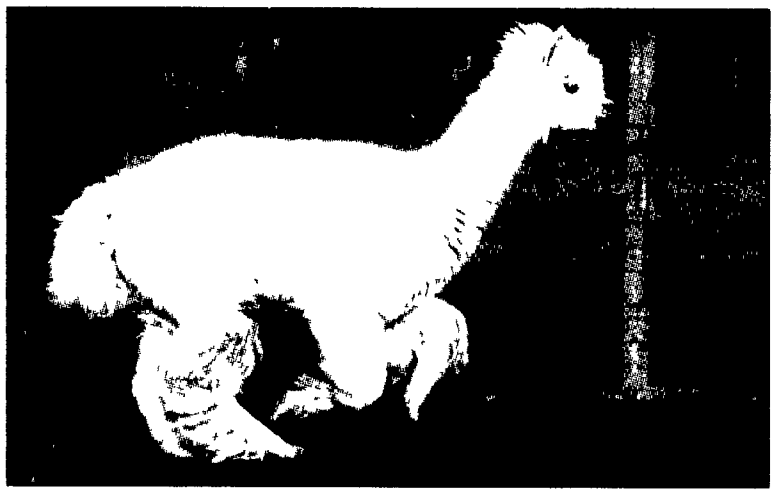
NEW LISBORN, N.J. — On farms all across the United States, there is a quiet revolution going on. Former dairy farms, small suburban "farmettes,' and horse stables are now populated with alpacas, the petite cousins to the llama and camel.

This ancient camelid is a new addition to the domestic livestock breeds available in the U.S.; having only been imported since the mid-1980's. Alpacas are better known in the countries surrounding their native lands: the high Andes Mountains of Peru, Bolivia, and Chile. But alpacas are rapidly growing in popularity, and may be popping up on a farm near you.

Fiber Credentials

For more than five thousand years, alpacas have been domesticated as a fiber animal, valued for a fleece that rivals cashmere for softness, but that is stronger, warmer, and lighter than wool.

Alpaca, as the animal's fiber is called, comes in more than two dozen lovely natural shades including white, black, grey and fawn— and dyes beautifully into at least 100 more. The alpaca fiber has a closed-scale pattern, making it more like silky hair than wool or other fur types. Hand spinners, knitters, and weavers have long valued this textile. It contains no lanolin, like sheep's wool, so alpacha is naturally cleaner and more pleasant to work with, even in the raw state.



The heavy fleece of the alpaca allows them to enjoy all but the harshest winter weather.

There are two alpaca "coat types" — huacaya and suri. The more common huacaya (say: "wa-kie-ya") is known for its delicate crimp-pattern, which lends a desirable 'give' to anything it is made into; adding drape to the finished product, and easing the effort needed to spin it into yarn. A huacaya alpaca's fleece puffs out like a super-soft afro hairstyle, so that a huacaya alpaca in full fleece resembles a fuzzy teddy bear.

The rarer suri alpaca ("sir-ee") is silkier, and its fleece hangs straight down, often twisting gently into tight little locks of fiber. The fleece of a suri alpaca, in motion, looks like so much silk fringe shimmering in the breeze. The smoother 'hand' and noticable luster of the suri transfers to the finished product, giving it a silky finish, and subtle sheen.

The fashion industry has long been familiar with alpaca, even though many consumers are not. Many popular designer labels make use of this luxury fiber in premium quality sweaters, coats, and scarves. High quality alpaca sweaters may bring $400, and suri alpaca coats sell for $1,000 and above. Many of those acquainted with alpaca's quality prefer its practical beauty to fur.

Alpacas are intelligent, playful, and curious.

Easy Care Critters

Alpaca may be a premium fiber, but that is only one reason that these adorable critters are gaining in popularity. Alpacas are small, with adults reaching between 110 and 180 pounds, and are easily kept in small pastures, and may be cared for by children and retirees. Alpacas are ruminants, and make good use of their feed. Four to five alpacas may be kept on a single acre of pasture. The breed is hardy, subject to few diseases, and are tolerant of varying climate. Their heavy fleece allows them to enjoy all but the worst

Up close and personal, alpacas are easily adaptable to children and retirees.

Gestations last 11-12 months, producing a single baby called a cria.

Raising alpacas provides a new option for traditional farmers.

Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Stretches Dairy Farmer Dollars

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — With the state of the industry and its ever-increasing demands, becoming more efficient, doing more with less, and buying in bulk have become necessities rather than choices. Dairy farmers know that to stay competitive and stay in business, they must employ these practices.

But the production side of the Pennsylvania dairy industry doesn't have a monopoly on efficiency and stretching the dollar to its limit. The dairy checkoff program, Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program (PDPP), is getting all Pennsylvania dairy farmers more bang for their buck with these same strategies. PDPP's dairy promotion checkoff programs are managed effectively and efficiently.

Part Of The Big Picture — But Still Local

PDPP is the checkoff advertising and promotion program representing farmers in 33 counties in western and north central Pennsylvania. Because of PDPP, television, radio and outdoor billboard advertising for milk and cheese reach hundreds of thousands of Pennsylvania consumers everyday — building demand for Pennsylvania dairy products. PDPP's advertising reaches the major population centers of Pittsburgh, Erie, Johnstown, and Altoona.

"That's where the bulk of the consumers are, so that's where our dairy checkoff money will do us the most good," says Karl Kroeck, chairman of the PDPP." "And PDPP does it the most efficient way possible — because they are part of the big picture — the big effort — the unified marketing plan for dairy promotion bringing one clear consistent message to all consumers."

Buying In Bulk — The Unified Marketing Plan

PDPP, through its affiliation with American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East and Dairy Management, Inc. (DMI), is part of the unified marketing plan for dairy promotion. Because dairy farmer checkoff funds from throughout the country are pooled together to buy huge amounts of network advertising, all farmers are getting more for your dairy advertising dollar. When PDPP spends $100,000 as part of the national, unified network advertising plan, dairy farmers get almost $150,000 worth of local advertising. In addition to the national buy, PDPP buys media locally in Pittsburgh and Johnstown/Altoona markets to further increase its advertising efforts. Now that's stretching your dollars.

PDPP contracts with the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East, which is the local planning and management organization responsible for increasing demand for U.S.-produced dairy products on behalf of America's dairy farmers. ADADC Mid East works closely with Dairy Management, Inc.™, the national dairy promotion organization, to implement dairy promotion, education and research programs nationwide.

Alpacas

winter weather, and shearing once a year, in the springtime, allows them to tolerate hot summer weather.

But ease of care does not tell the whole story, for people who have never kept livestock before are paying large sums to own alpacas. Alpacas are quite intelligent, playful and curious; so its not unheard of for people to go into breeding alpacas just for the love of interacting with these fascinating creatures.

Alpacas graze and browse, living happily on grass in the warm months and grass hay in the winter. A small scoop of commercially-available grain-pellet mix assures ideal nutrition for animals that are breeding and growing a lovely fleece.

Gestations may last 11 to 12 months, producing a single baby, called a "cria." But the wait is worth it, and crias most often appear with little human intervention, preferring to arrive during the peak sun hours of a clear day.

Show Me the Show Ring

Just like dogs, horses, or any breed kept for a 4-H project, alpacas are shown for fun or ribbons. Halter classes, that assess conformation as well as fleece, are held in many area locations. There is also judging in costume, agility, and youth classes, so everyone can get into the act.

As a working livestock breed, alpacas require only minimal grooming to be shown. Excessive washing or combing disturbs the precious structure of each lock, so is discouraged. Blue ribbons go to animals from large farm and first-time breeders alike.

Big Business, Family Business

Because alpacas are still relatively rare, have long gestations, and a single young, their price tag can be high. A quality, bred female, in a desirable color, may sell for $10,000-22,000; with lower prices for most males, or younger animals. But alpacas may produce many offspring in a lifetime, and consistently high alpaca prices assure a healthy return on investment. Non-breeding quality "fiber" or "companion" alpacas may be bought for as little as $1,000, so that prospective alpaca breeders may decide if their venture will primarily be based on fiber sales or breeding stock.

There are many ways in which alpacas may enter your farm's future. As a retirement venture that requires less effort than horses or cattle; as a family business, in which the kids can do their fair share; as a fiber or crafts oriented business possibly run by a single woman, or with a bigger investment as a new option on an old farm.

No matter your circumstances, alpaca breeding offers answers to area farmers.

To learn more about alpacas visit Fenwick Manor Farm, in New Lisbon, New Jersey during Fall Farm Fest on Saturday, Sept. 15, with a rain date of Sunday, September 16. Planned activities include educational seminars, demonstrations, and tours; as well as alpaca products for sale, food vendors, and gifts.

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Well, this is a vine mess we've gotten ourselves into.

"Gee, string bean volunteers, how neat," was my reaction to the plants at first glance.

Carefully, I began threading tips of the slender, fragile vines with their heart-shaped leaves on grass stalks and weed stems, aiming them up toward the lowest rung of the split-rail fence. Anything cultivated on this bank near the dairy barn must tolerate daily dustings from sawdust being dumped into the barn bedding cart, cats digging at their roots and the potential of being munched by stray cows or heifers.

That last possibility eliminates lots of botanical possibilities which could cause upsets — or worse — to the cows' four stomachs. (Multiply a stomachache times four and use your imagination).

Two seasons ago, sugar snap peas were the choice. It was a "chancy" attempt, since cows love pea vines and one wandering, busybody bovine could have wiped out the entire stretch of vines on the fence. Summer turned droughty and sweltering; the sugar snaps withered away. Last year's attempt had to be something more heat-tolerant.

Climbing string beans fit the criteria, and the small row of white seeds popped up almost immediately. Abundant rains sent the vines climbing with purposeful enthusiasm. The resulting tangle drooped oodles of long, slender beans that were crisp and tasty. We picked beans, ate beans, froze beans, and shared extras.

After debating a rerun attempt at that success, a row of cutting sunflowers won out instead. Not only are they drought tolerant and bountiful with bright color and bouquets material, but maturing flower heads going to seed would attract the beautiful goldfinches which perch on the heads and snatch the seeds.

Soon after the sunflowers began to send up sturdy stalks, the heart-leaved vines turned up. I guessed that a few of the string bean pods had been missed in picking, and gone to seed among the thick tangle of jungle-like growth. Lucky for us, that would mean delicious pole beans for a bonus, second season, with no extra effort.

Except one recent morning, I noticed that the bean vines bore stunning, deep-purple morning glories blossoms. Closer inspection showed that another vine nearby displayed a number of similar blooms in a bright pink.

In a major memory lapse (imagine that), I had forgotten the dozen or so morning glory seedlings planted weeks before at intervals under the fence. Because they resembled last year's beans, my jump to conclusion had been a leap in the wrong direction.

Since a planting of bush string beans in the garden has already given us plenty, and a second batch is setting buds, the fenceful of colorful early morning blooms a bunch more enjoyable anyway. Some have jumped the fence and are threading their way up through the sunflowers to join the finches while one aerial performer is headed up the electric transformer anchor cable.

Despite the dry, choking-humidity and heat of recent weeks (or maybe because of), a vine mess of other assorted volunteers threatens to overrun us. A random hill of pumpkin seeds on the same steep bank where the morning glories thrive has sent thick vines and broad leaves across a 15 by 15 foot-section of bank and lawn, covering everything under a thick canopy of scratchy leaves. We can spy at least a dozen fat, yellow, immature pumpkins hunkered down under the thick, green cover, a torturing tease to the grandkids who want to start picking pumpkins "right now!"

Volunteer grape vines thread through hosta plants in the back yard, Virginia creeper inches higher and higher up the east side of our old brick house and gourd stalks entangle themselves into a host of sites. One 12-footer has snaked out of a planter on the front porch and is marching toward the back yard.

I'd like to introduce these vigorous vining volunteers to the far worse, thorn-infested, mile-a-minute creeping weeds which keep trying to blot out the perennial border. Trying to pull them is like fighting with a cat.

Maybe all these viney volunteers can be trained to go strangle each other and save me the hassle.

Melons Are 'Simply Delicious' This Year

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The hot, dry weather experienced in many parts of the state this year should mean lots of extra sweet "Simply Delicious" Pennsylvania cantaloupes and watermelons this year. Melons prefer warm weather and dry conditions generally produce a sweeter tasting melon. The harvest is well under way and consumers can enjoy the delicious and juicy flavor of Pennsylvania melons fresh from a local farmers' market, roadside market or supermarket.

Pennsylvania producers annually grow about 1,000 acres of cantaloupes, which ranks the Keystone State as eighth in the production of cantaloupes, plus over 400 acres of watermelons. Many Pennsylvania growers plant their melons in black plastic mulch to increase soil temperature and conserve soil moisture, producing a better melon. These tasty and nutritious fruits should be available statewide through September.

The fruits Americans call cantaloupes should more correctly be called muskmelons. True cantaloupes originated in Europe and have a rough, warty surface while muskmelons have a nettled rind. Muskmelons originated in the Near East and were enjoyed by the ancient Egyptians and Romans. The Romans introduced them to Europe and the Spanish brought them to America. Watermelons are thought to have originated in Africa.

Although some consumers have their own standards for choosing cantaloupes, there's no disputing some basic ripeness indicators. A good cantaloupe will have no trace of a stem and a pronounced cavity where the melon was pulled from the vine. These two characteristics indicate that the cantaloupe was harvested when it was fully mature, which is important because melons do not increase their sugar content after they have been harvested.

When buying cantaloupes, select melons that have a thick netting and a rich golden color underneath. They should also have a delicate aroma. A cantaloupe that is still firm can be stored uncut at room temperature to let the flesh become softer and juicer but, as mentioned above, it will not become sweeter.

Watermelons should have neither a very shiny or very dull rind, but rather a waxy "bloom." They should be yellowish on the underside — not greenish-white. If they have stem, it should be brown and dry, not green. The traditional "thump" test, besides almost being an art, is not particularly accurate.

Melons can be enjoyed in variety of ways at any time of the day. Sliced, cantaloupe makes a delicious breakfast feature. Diced or balled, either cantaloupe or watermelon make a cool and nutritious addition to lunch or dinner as an appetizer or dessert. Cantaloupe and watermelon mixed with honeydew, blueberries, peaches and other fruits makes an absolutely wonderful summer fruit salad. Generally, cantaloupe should be served at room temperature or only slightly chilled to enjoy the full flavor while watermelon should be icy cold to get the best flavor.

The United States Department of Agriculture, in its Food Pyramid, recommends two to four servings a day of fruit. Each serving of cantaloupe contains only 35 calories and is a good source of vitamins A and C plus potassium. Watermelon has only 32 calories and is also a source of vitamins A and C.

How Do You Freeze Beets?

For best results, freeze beets that are less than three inches in diameter. Larger beets tend to have an undesirable texture when frozen.

Cook beets until tender in the skins. Slip off skins. Slice, cube, or freeze whole.

You can freeze on trays and package after they are frozen or place convenient amounts in freezer bags or boxes.

Beets are a low acid food and must be pressure canned. If you do not have a pressure canner, you can still can beets if you prepare pickled beets, which have a much higher acid from the vinegar in the pickling liquid.

Consuming Thoughts

The charcoal grill, used throughout the summer and in fall for tailgating parties, often worries consumers about the cancer-causing potential of meat cooked over an open flame. The cookout featuring barbecue ribs, chicken, fish grilled or blackened is a tradition. How much risk it entails is still unknown.

Whether you're using a gas, electric or charcoal grill, this high-temperature cooking method does create compounds that experts deem carcinogenic. This probably occurs much less during oven broiling, because the heating coil is above the food and the cooking process is faster. The principal danger lies in cooking fatty meat over a heat source. When the fat drips on the coals or hot coils, it forms carcinogenic substances that the smoke picks up and deposits on the food. Moreover, carcinogens are formed when flames hit the meat.

The American Institute for Cancer Research indicates that cooking meat, poultry and fish at high temperatures, especially over an open flame, can cause cancer-promoting substances to form. A diet high in meat cooked at high temperatures, such as by grilling, barbecuing, broiling and frying, possible increases the risk of stomach and colorectal cancers. Don't give up your Labor Day cookout, just follow safe grilling tips and use the following lower-heat cooking methods for your day-to-day meal preparation.

Choose a lower-heat cooking method next time you prepare meat, chicken or fish, such as: baking, boiling, braising, microwaving, poaching, roasting, stir-frying, steaming, stewing or using a crock pot.

And the next time you barbecue, follow these grilling tips:

- Select lean, well-trimmed meats to grill.
- Cover the grill with foil and then punch holes to let the fat drip out.
- Marinate meats using an oil-free marinade.
- Avoid flare-ups. Burning meat juices and fats produce harmful smoke.
- Keep a squirted bottle close by in case coals flame. If the smoke gets too heavy, use the water to reduce it.
- Wrap vegetables and fish in foil to preserve flavor and protect them from the smoke.
- Baste foods while cooking, but not with fat. Lemon juice, wine, barbecue sauces, or combinations thereof will add flavor.
- When cooking poultry or thick meat, try poaching or microwaving it until partially cooked, then finish it on the grill. This cuts cooking time and reduces exposure to smoke.
- After cooking, scrape off heavily charred materials on the meat surface.
- Don't cook out every day. As with other good things, moderation is in order.

— Cool Canning Tools —

Two newer canning tools on the market are a lid wand and a bubble freer. The lid wand is shaped like a stick with a small magnet on the end. It is used to remove flat lids from the hot water when you are preparing them. It prevents you from handling the lid with your hands, which could contaminate it and also from scalding fingers in hot water.

The bubble freer is a long plastic spatula wedge used to free bubbles from the jars. Using this instead of a knife may save jars from damage tapping bottom with a knife. Look for both tools at stores where canning equipment is sold.

Why Do The Undersides Of Metal Lids Sometimes Discolor?

Natural compounds in some foods, particularly acids, corrode metal and made a dark deposit on the underside of jar lids. This deposit on lids of sealed, properly processed canned foods is harmless.

Canning Jar Facts

Hundreds of jars at a fraction of the cost of new can be found at garage sales.

Should you buy them?

Just like anything else you get at a garage sale, you do not know how it was handled or how old it is.

If you are not sure of the condition of the old jars, immerse in water and bring to a boil. Boil 15 minutes. If they are defective, they will break. Better to discover this before you fill with food and process.

Jars can be traumatized (roughly handled) — when they are heaped in baskets or boxes, when they bang up against each other, when you use a metal knife to release air bubbles in the jars and let the knife hit the bottom of the jar, or the sharp edge scratches the inside, or if you scour jars with steel wool or kitchen scrapers.

Be a Jar Detective: A broken jar in your canner is aggravating and slows your canning day. If you look at the pieces carefully, you may be able to determine the cause. Jars have three basic breakage patterns. Here are some clues so you can do a little detective work and trouble shoot for your family and friends.

- Thermal Shock — produces just a few pieces. It looks like the bottom fell out. This often happens to more than one jar in the load. It is caused by filling jars with cold food and liquid that is not boiling followed by plunging into water that is already boiling. Also caused by setting hot jars to cool on a cold surface or near a cold draft or open airy window or accidentally spattering hot jars with cold water. Also caused by scratches on jars or not enough water in pressure canner.
- Pressure Break — produces a vertical crack that forks and divides. Caused by not enough headspace to allow for expansion; screwing jar lids on too tight so jars can't vent, cooling a pressure canner too fast, or allowing pressure to fluctuate too widely.
- Impact Break Starts from the point of shock and radiates straight out from there. Caused by bumping, dropping, or hitting with a sharp knife to remove air bubbles. Use a plastic or wooden tool to remove air bubbles.

A final thought, if you use jars for freezing, it might be a good idea to test by boiling for impact damage before you use them in a canner. Life in a freezer can be hard on a jar.

Use only Mason canning jars for pressure processing.

BECOME A GOURMET GRILLER With Alaska Seafood

Summer is the time of year for kicking back and relaxing. It's also the time for outdoor entertaining and backyard barbecues.

Take a break from the ordinary and treat yourself to the simple elegance of Alaska seafood

You'll be amazed at how quick and easy it is to prepare an elegant gourmet meal on your backyard grill with Alaska seafood Have some fun and try several of the simple and delicious recipes featured in this article Complement your meal with a choice glass of wine, and you're in for a true summertime treat!

Grilling, of course, is one of the oldest cooking methods known to mankind However, did you know it is a fast, easy and healthy way to preserve the natural flavor and nutrients of the fish? For direct grilling, it is best to choose a firm species of fish, such as salmon or halibut, sliced at least one-inch thick For more delicate fish, such as cod or pollock, or small shellfish such as Alaska scallops, use a hinged basket or lightly oiled sheet of aluminum foil

Here are a few simple and indispensable grilling tips

- Start with a clean grill
- Prepare the grill ahead of time—preheat
- Cook fish over a medium-hot fire
- Grill fish for approximately 10 minutes per inch of thickness, measured at the thickest part
- Turn fish over halfway through estimated cooking time
- Baste fish often with flavored marinade or butter
- Remove fish from the grill when no longer translucent in the center and when flesh is tender and easily flakes with fork
- Cook shellfish, such as shrimp or scallops, quickly over a hot fire
- Heat Alaska crab through before serving by placing the crab legs directly onto a hot grill for 4–5 minutes Alaska crab is already fully cooked

Check out your local seafood counter to discover the wide variety of seafood Alaska has to offer For unparalleled flavor, color and texture, nothing compares with distinctive salmon If you prefer whitefish, try tender and delicate pollock cod or sole For a slightly firmer and meatier texture, halibut is a great choice And shellfish lovers will be in heaven with sweet and succulent scallops, as well as three kinds of crab including King crab, Snow crab and Dungeness crab—all with irresistible melt-in-your-mouth flavor and texture

Another great thing about choosing Alaska seafood is that it is not only healthy and delicious, it is harvested in an ecologically friendly way—called sustainable fishing This means that Alaska fishermen do not over-fish and that the fishery is managed in a way that ensures the health and diversity of the marine ecosystem In fact Alaska salmon is the first U S. fishery to be certified as sustainable by the Marine Stewardship Council

INVEST IN YOUR HEALTH WITH ALASKA SEAFOOD

Alaska seafood pampers the palate, but you might not know that it also enriches the body Full of high quality protein, vitamins and minerals, many species also contain a high amount of extremely beneficial "good" fats called omega-3 fatty acids that can provide five vital health benefits

1 Protects the heart: Omega-3 fatty acids help reduce the risk of heart disease by acting as natural blood thinners which reduce abnormal clotting, keeping triglycerides down at safe levels and lowering blood pressure

2 Improves brain function: Research suggests that eliminating deficiencies of omega-3 fatty acids could improve conditions associated with mental disorders such as depression, senile dementia and attention deficit hyperactivity disorder

3 Reduces certain cancer risks: A new finding indicates that omega-3 fatty acids can create "roadblocks" that make the migration of certain cancer cells in the body more difficult

4 Natural anti-inflammatory agent: Omega-3 fatty acids have helped to ease the symptoms of ailments such as arthritis, asthma, menstrual cramps, migraine headaches and many skin disorders

5 Aids vision: Omega-3 fatty acids are essential to the health of the retina and also prevent damage to/increase circulation in the tiny blood vessels of the eyes.

It's easy to incorporate omega-3 fatty acids into your diet: simply enjoy two servings of Alaska salmon/seafood a week! In fact, the American Heart Association now recommends that consumers eat at least two servings per week of fish high in omega-3 fatty acids.

Grilled Alaska salmon, halibut and Snow crab

A CHEF'S SECRET FOR GRILLING ALASKA SALMON AND HALIBUT

by JOHN ASH

Simply grilled fish in the summer is one of life's true delights. The smell of fresh seafood coming off either a wood fire, charcoal or gas grill always beckons in a way that heightens the senses and stimulates the appetite. Enjoyed with a glass of crisp white wine or a lighter red, it doesn't get much better.

Fresh, wild-caught Alaska salmon and halibut are so delicious that flavoring and cooking them should be kept simple so that the flavor of the fish is right up front and not obscured. I've shared some favorite toppings of mine for seafood that complement the fish without overpowering it. I like to call these the "new mother sauces" because they rely on fresh ingredients rather than cream and butter to flavor the fish They are both healthy and flavorful

When grilling fresh fish, here's a technique I use to add some moistness and flavor to the fish and protect against overcooking it Very simply, all you do is make a brine and submerge the fish in it for 2 to 4 hours before grilling it You then remove the fish from the brine, rinse it gently and pat dry. Brush it with a little olive oil and season lightly with sea salt and freshly ground pepper and then grill until it's just done I think you'll be amazed at both the texture and the flavor that this tasty brine bath adds

SALSA VERDE

This is a quick little sauce of Spanish origin that is delicious on all kinds of grilled, pan-seared or roasted fish. Note that it uses blanched or roasted garlic rather than the fresh, raw type. I think this is especially important if you are going to make the sauce ahead of time. Within an hour, raw garlic can become harsh and hot. Blanched or roasted garlic maintains its flavor and doesn't overpower the sauce as it sits.

- 1 cup coarsely chopped parsley
- 4 anchovy fillets, rinsed
- 2 tablespoons drained capers
- 2 tablespoons blanched or roasted garlic (see note above)
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil or mint (OR 1 tablespoon chopped fresh tarragon)
- 1 tablespoon finely grated lemon zest
- 2/3 cup or so fruity extra virgin olive oil
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste

Add the parsley, anchovies, capers, garlic, basil and zest to a food processor or blender. With machine running, slowly add the oil until just blended Sauce should still have a little texture Season with salt and pepper Can be stored covered and refrigerated for up to 1 day.

Makes about 1 cup

BASIC BRINE FOR SEAFOOD

- 1/3 cup each sea or kosher salt and brown sugar
- 1 quart cool water
- 3 pounds (or less) fresh Alaska halibut or salmon

Stir the salt, sugar and water together until the salt and sugar are dissolved. Add the fish and place in the refrigerator for 2 to 4 hours.

Grilled Alaska Salmon With Peach-Olive Tapenade

- 1 large peach, peeled and cut in 1/2-inch pieces (OR about 1-1/2 cups frozen peaches, thawed)
- 2 teaspoons fresh lime juice
- 1/2 cup finely chopped black olives
- 1/4 cup finely chopped pimento-stuffed green olives
- 2 teaspoons capers
- 1 canned anchovy fillet, mashed into a paste (OR 1/2 teaspoon anchovy paste)
- 1 Alaska salmon fillet (1 to 1-1/2 lb.), thawed if necessary
- 2 Tbsps. olive oil
- 1/4 teaspoon fresh ground pepper

Make Tapenade Place peaches in small bowl; stir in lime juice. Add olives, capers and anchovy paste, stir to combine. Set aside.

Brush Alaska salmon with olive oil and pepper. Grill or bake at 425°F for 10 minutes per inch of thickness, or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork Serve salmon topped with Tapenade

Makes about 2 cups Tapenade, 4 servings

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

We are home from our vacation in the Pocono Mountains. But, memories still linger as we peel apples to make applesauce.

Our grandchildren enjoyed fishing and they caught several small fish. Of course, the lines got tangled and caught on rocks. Most of the time the older folks were able to help them start afresh. They enjoyed the boat rides in their grandfather's boat too.

Some of our group drove to the Lackawanna Coal Company near Scranton. Here we boarded rail cars and descended 300 feet to an old coal mine. The temperature is a constant 50 degrees in the mine. In 1902, the anthracite coal miners were paid 21 cents an hour. Many children worked in the mines too. Some drove mules, who pulled the coal cars, and they were paid 13 cents an hour. Others were barn cleaners. When an animal was taken into the mine, he lived there for his lifetime. Some laborers laid track, picked slate, or pumped water out of the mine.

While some folks went on a three-mile hike, I went with the youngest grandchildren to a zoo. It was called "Claw 'N' Paws" wild animal park. I did not expect the variety of wild animals, but instead thought it would be a petting zoo — which it also was. The children could walk among the deer, goats, and sheep. Or they could feed the giraffe carrots. It had a long black tongue that wrapped around the carrots in their hands.

In the evening, the children put on their swimsuits and played with hundreds of small water balloons. It was fun to watch them. They have so much more energy than we do.

National Beef Cook-Off Names Pennsylvania Resident As A Finalist

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — Patricia Harmon, Baden, is one of 20 national finalists who will be competing for the $50,000 grand prize in the 2001 National Beef Cook-Off.

The finalists for the National Beef Cook-Off, one of the nation's most popular and long running cooking contests, were announced recently. A self-proclaimed "recipe contester," Harmon has entered at least one cooking contest a week for the last six years. She entered the cook-off because her family loves beef and she wants to win the prize money.

"The competition will take place with a collection of the best beef recipes America has to offer," said Sherry Hill, National Beef Cook-Off project manager. "We've selected 20 finalists and recipes that are a cut above the rest when it comes to showcasing the great taste, convenience, versatility, and nutrition of beef."

The checkoff-funded National Beef Cook-Off pays homage for the first time this year to beef's long-time companion at the dinner table — the potato. Through a new partnership with the National Potato Promotion Board, the Cook-Off has introduced two new recipe categories that pair beef and potatoes. The number of contestants increased 25 percent, reflecting this category growth.

The Cook-Off will be Sept. 28-29 in Tucson, Arizona. Each finalist receives an all-expenses paid trip to the competition, where they will cook up their beef recipe for a panel of five judges who will select the winning recipes based on taste, ease of preparation and appearance.

In addition to the Grand Prize "Best of Beef" award of $50,000, eight cash prizes totaling $60,000 are up for grabs in four categories: Fresh Beef; Prepared Beef; Fresh Beef and Fresh Potato; and Prepared Beef and Prepared Potato.

To learn more about preparing beef, past Cook-Off winning recipes, and the National Beef Cook-Off, visit www.beefcook-off.org. For easy potato meals, visit potatohelp.com.

Here is Harmon's recipe:

Tex-Mex Smoky Beef Chili Hash

- 1 package (16 to 17 ounces) refrigerated fully-cooked boneless beef pot roast with gravy
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 package (20 ounces) refrigerated pre-diced potatoes with onion
- 1 cup prepared thick and chunky salsa
- ½ to 1 teaspoon finely chopped canned chipotle pepper plus 1 teaspoon adobo sauce
- 1 cup shredded Mexican cheese blend

Heat oil in large nonstick skillet over medium-high heat until hot. Add potatoes; cover and cook 8 to 10 minutes or until potatoes are lightly browned, turning occasionally.

Meanwhile, remove pot roast from package; set aside. Transfer gravy to medium bowl; stir in salsa, chipotle pepper and adobo sauce.

Cut pot roast into 1-inch pieces. Add beef and salsa mixture to skillet; mix well. Cover and cook over medium heat 10 minutes or until potatoes are tender. Sprinkle with cheese; cook, covered, 1 to 2 minutes or until cheese is melted.

Is It Necessary To Exhaust A Pressure Canner?

Yes, it is very important to allow steam to escape for 10 minutes before closing the valve, or placing the weight on the vent. If the canner is not exhausted, the inside temperature may not correspond to the pressure on the gauge.

ANSWER — David Simpler, Elkton, Md., wrotes that in the 1950s, his family ate watermelon rind preserves, for which he requested the recipe. Thanks to Shirley Frick, Felton, for sending her recipe.

Watermelon Rind Preserves

Peel off green part of rind and also peel off the red part until you have just the greenish meat part of the rind and then slice that really thin.

Soak in light salt water an hour and it won't take as much sugar.

Drain well.

Put one cup melon and 1 cup sugar (cup for cup) until you've used up all the melon. Let set until juice rises. Do not add any water.

Cook until done and colored red clear through. To have a better taste, cut up a lemon and rind and cook it with the watermelon.

Cook until the mixture is syrupy. It takes a long to cook. Cook slow to keep from sticking.

You can cook one day and shut off and finish cooking the next day.

Pack in hot jars and seal.

Let stand about 30 minutes or overnight. Stir. Put in baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour. Sprinkle top with shredded cheddar and return to oven just until cheese is melted.

Controlling Indoor Asthma Triggers

Consider the fact that many allergens and irritants are found indoors. Add to that the fact that Americans spend up to 90 percent of their time indoors. It is not surprising, therefore, that exposure to indoor asthma triggers is a significant contributor to the asthma problem.

Conversely, controlled studies show reducing exposure to indoor allergens including secondhand smoke, dust mites, pet dander, molds, and cockroaches can reduce asthma symptoms. When asthma episodes do happen, they could be less severe. Many people, however, are still focusing only on treating asthma once an episode has already started. How can you keep these asthma attacks from starting in the first place?

• Secondhand smoke, also known as Environmental Tobacco Smoke, includes both exhaled mainstream smoke from smokers and sidestream smoke from the end of a cigarette, cigar, or pipe. It contains more than 4,000 substances, including more than 40 that are linked to cancer. Many of the compounds in tobacco smoke are released at higher rates in sidestream smoke than in mainstream smoke.

Young children and babies are especially vulnerable to secondhand smoke, and up to one million asthmatic children have their condition made worse by exposure to secondhand smoke. Secondhand smoke can also cause young children to develop asthma.

In addition, children exposed to secondhand smoke are more likely to suffer from pneumonia, bronchitis, and other lung diseases, and be more likely to have ear infections. Given the adverse health effects of secondhand smoke, it is important to avoid smoking in your home or car. Until you can quit smoking, you should smoke outside. Never smoke in the presence of asthmatics or children, who are particularly susceptible to the effects of secondhand smoke.

• Dust mites are tiny, spiderlike animals that are too small to be seen. Dust mites feed on skin flakes and like to live in warm, humid places. Therefore, ideal places for mites to live are mattresses, pillows, carpets, fabric-covered furniture, bedcovers, clothes, and stuffed toys, where there is high humidity and an ample food source.

Both the dust mites themselves, and their feces or droppings, are allergens and can trigger asthma and cause young children to develop asthma. When avoiding dust mite triggers, try to both kill dust mites and clean to remove mites and their droppings.

Wash bedding once a week in hot water, which has been shown to reduce mites.

Stuffed toys are often overlooked as a reservoir for mites. Choose washable stuffed toys and wash them regularly. Keep them off beds to reduce the exposure received during long hours of sleep.

Zippered mattresses and pillow covers that do not allow the mites to pass through appear to be effective in reducing the amount of exposure.

Vacuum floors and/or remove dust often, which may help reduce exposure to dust mite allergens. Avoid vacuuming when the person with asthma is in the room.

Because mites like to live in high humidity, keeping humidity levels low, between 30-50% relative humidity, can be effective in lowering mite populations Pet Dander Every one probably knows someone who is allergic to animals. Contrary to popular belief, people are not allergic to the fur on pets, but to the animals' skin flakes, saliva, and urine.

Most people don't realize that pet allergens can actually stay in a room long after a pet has been removed. Because pets and people move around in a home, it can be difficult to contain pet allergens in any home where there is a pet. If an asthmatic is allergic to animals, it is best not to have a pet at all. Consider keeping the pet outdoors or finding a new home for the pet.

If you remove a pet, be sure to clean very thoroughly to remove the pet allergens. Clean the floors, walls, and especially the carpets and upholstered furniture. Some asthmatics may find that isolating the pet is sufficiently effective in helping to keep their asthma under control. If so, be sure to keep the animal out of sleeping areas at all times, and keep the animal away from upholstered furniture, carpets, and stuffed toys.

• Mold can also trigger asthma attacks. Molds can be found almost anywhere; they can grow on virtually any substance when moisture is present.

Molds produce tiny spores that reproduce, just as plants produce seeds. Mold spores waft through the indoor and outdoor air continually. When mold spores land on a damp spot, they may begin growing and digesting whatever they are growing on in order to survive. Molds can grow on wood, paper, carpet, and food.

There is no practical way to eliminate all mold and mold spores in the indoor environment. When tackling a mold problem, you need to both clean up the mold and correct any problems of excess moisture.

Reducing moisture also has the benefit of helping to reduce other asthma triggers, such as dust mites and cockroaches.

There are a number of common places in the home where moisture and mold can be a problem, such as kitchens, bathrooms, and basements.

Fix any plumbing leaks immediately. If water damage occurs, dry water-damaged areas completely within 24 to 48 hours. In some cases, soaked materials such as carpeting may need to be replaced.

Check the various drip pans in your home and keep them clean and dry.

Use the exhaust fans in your bathrooms and kitchens when showering or cooking.

Make sure that your clothes dryer vents to the outside.

Keep the relative humidity in your home between 30 and 50 percent to maximize comfort and minimize asthma triggers. Using an air conditioner or dehumidifier can help to lower humidity when it is high.

Avoid installing carpet directly on concrete floors in the lowest level of your home.

• Cockroaches, or, more accurately, their body parts and droppings, can trigger asthma symptoms. The key to controlling cockroaches is to keep them from entering your home, and keep your home free of sources of food and water. There are a number of ways to make your home attractive to humans but unattractive to pests.

Do not leave out any food or garbage.

Store food in airtight containers.

Clean all food crumbs or spilled liquids right away.

Wash dishes when you are done using them, and do not leave dirty dishes in the sink, especially overnight.

Keep counters, sinks, and tables clean and clear of clutter.

Fix plumbing leaks and other moisture problems.

Remove piles of boxes, newspapers, and other items where cockroaches may hide.

Make sure trash in your home is properly stored in containers with lids that close securely, and remove trash daily.

If pests still continue to be a problem, try using poison baits, boric acid, or traps first before using pesticide sprays. Keep in mind that pesticides are toxic for people as well, so try to use the least toxic methods for pest control first. If you must use sprays, do the following: Carefully follow instructions on the label and limit the spray to the infested area.

Do not spray where you prepare or store food, or where young children play, crawl, or sleep.

Make sure there is plenty of fresh air when you spray, and keep the person with asthma out of the room.

The following EPA website has additional information on controlling each of these asthma triggers: http://www.epa.gov/iaq/biologic.html.

Can You Freeze Tomatoes?

Smaller tomatoes can be frozen whole. Larger ones may be quartered. Either way, remove the skins first (they tend to taste like cellophane). Pack into containers, adding salt if desired. Leave headroom for expansion. These tomatoes are best for cooking, soups or casseroles.

Cook a tomato mixture of fresh tomatoes, celery, pepper and onion with a favorite herb blend, then freeze. This is a great base for sauces, soups and casseroles.

Tomato juice may also be frozen. Just quarter tomatoes and simmer five to ten minutes before pressing through a sieve. Allow adequate head space for expansion.

The "triple looper ride" is the most thrilling fun for the Funk children and their friends who visit the farm. The girls climb the rafters to catch the rope and swing back and forth before dropping into a soft landing on stacks of hay.

Summertime With The Funk Family

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Friends of the Funk family love coming to the farm to play. There's so much to do. And, such a big place to run.

The farm is lots of fun for children but lots of work for parents.

"We are just an ordinary family," said Pam.

Perhaps, but not too many families have a 100-acre family farm that has been in the family for 200 years. That was long before Katy, 10; Lindsay, 8; Aimee, 4; and Kyle, 2, were born.

The children are the eighth generation to live on the farm.

The children like to help their parents with the cows. Dad milks 50 cows, mom feeds the calves and cows and runs the silo loader.

Lindsay likes to help feed the calves. Her favorite calves (red and white Holsteins) are named Curly Sue and Cutie.

Aimee, the comedian of the family, likes to pretend she is an actress and do silly jokes. She also likes to ride the farm 4-wheeler.

Although Katy is only 10, she puts the milkers on the cows and even milks the cows by hand a bit to get some milk for the seven kittens that live on the farm.

Katy also likes to play basketball and takes piano lessons.

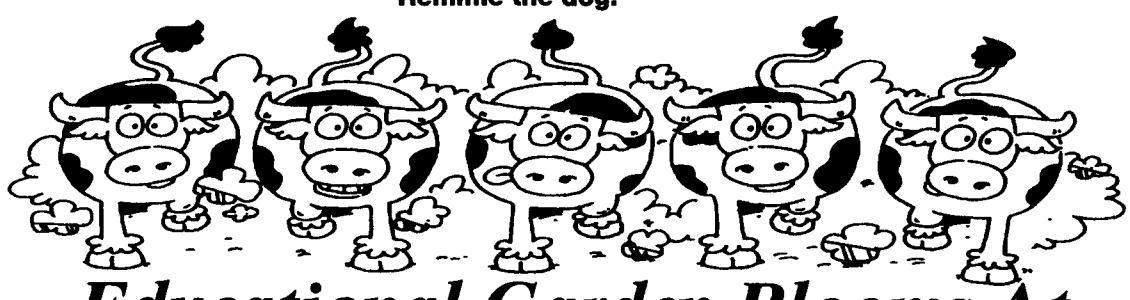
The children also have one duck, three bunnies, and lots of chickens. They like to name their animals unusual names. For example, S'mores and Tapioca are names for the bunnies, and Remmie the dog was named after a gun.

At two years of age, Kyle loves playing with trucks.

It won't be long before school starts. When that happens, there is less time for play on the farm.

Jay and Pam Funk with Katy, 10; Lindsay, 8; Aimee, 4; and Kyle, 2, prefer this type of transportation on the farm.

The girls play with one of the seven puppies born to Remmie the dog.



Educational Garden Blooms At Hands-on House Children's Museum

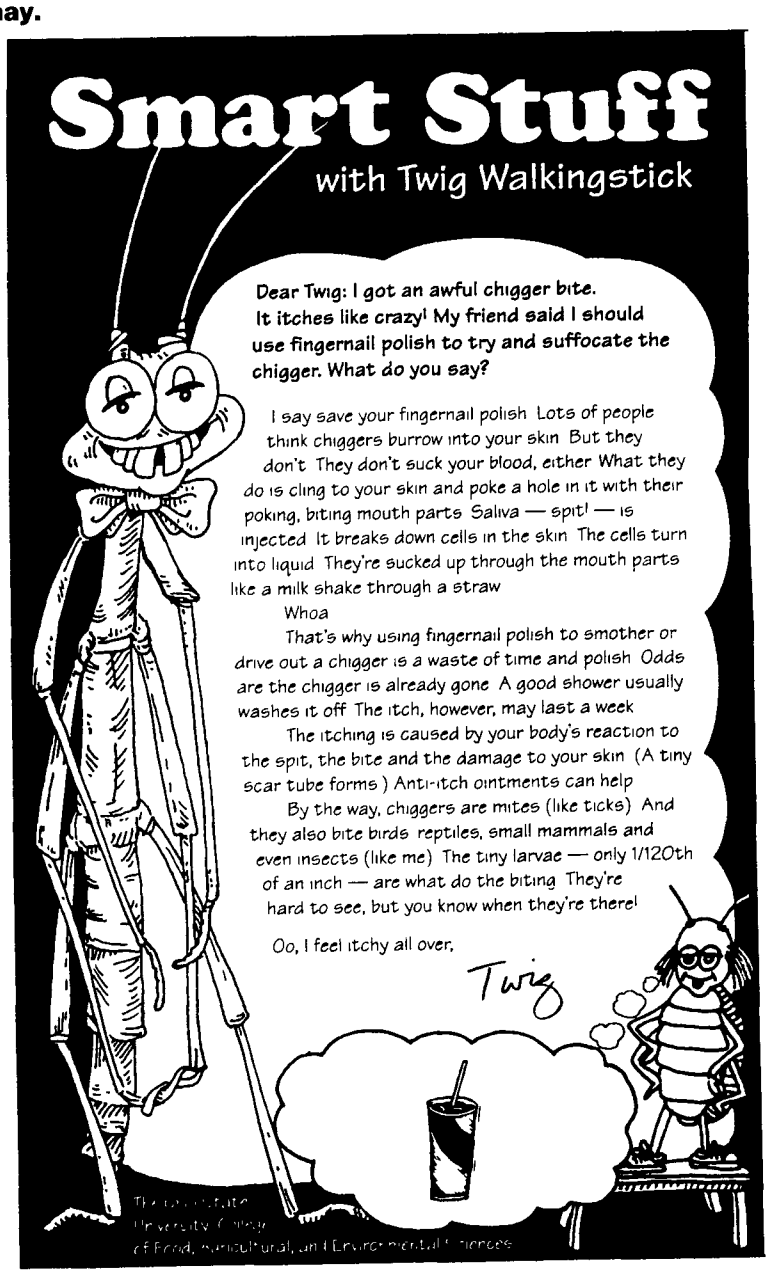
LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Last year, Hands-on House Children's Museum moved into a new facility that more than doubled the space available for children to explore and learn. Now, through the efforts of the Junior League of Lancaster, the museum has grown again, with the addition of an outdoor educational garden located at Hands-on House.

The educational garden is made up of several theme garden areas for children to explore. The dinosaur garden includes a skeleton with metal ribs to climb through and a stone head that doubles as a sand box. A science and discovery area comprised of a plant cave, human sundial and weather station further the educational mission of the museum. Mr. McGregor's garden has a Peter Rabbit twist to it and features raised beds where children can observe the different stages of plant growth. Wildflowers and perennials add color to the area, and many of the plants were selected to enhance the themes. For example, many large-size perennials surround the dinosaur garden. Stone animals and colorful climbing platforms give kids an opportunity to get physical.

"The new garden provides the museum many fantastic opportunities to extend the museum's mission of hands-on learning through playing to the outside and the natural environment," said Lynne Morrison, executive director of Hands-on House.

The garden is open during public museum hours and entrance is included in the price of admission to Hands-on House. Public museum hours are Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; Friday 10 a.m.-8 p.m.; Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; and Sunday noon-5 p.m. Admission is $5 per person for adults and children.

Hands-on House, Children's Museum of Lancaster is a not-for-profit museum designed for 2-10-year-olds. Based on the philosophy that children learn best while playing and having fun, the museum features interactive exhibits which are designed for adults and children to explore together. Hands-on House is open to the public year round. For more information, contact Hands-On House at (717) 569-KIDS or visit the museum's Website, www.handsonhouse.org.



Smart Stuff
with Twig Walkingstick
Dear Twig: I got an awful chigger bite. It itches like crazy! My friend said I should use fingernail polish to try and suffocate the chigger. What do you say?
I say save your fingernail polish. Lots of people think chiggers burrow into your skin. But they don't. They don't suck your blood, either. What they do is cling to your skin and poke a hole in it with their poking, biting mouth parts. Saliva — spit! — is injected. It breaks down cells in the skin. The cells turn into liquid. They're sucked up through the mouth parts like a milk shake through a straw.
Whoa.
That's why using fingernail polish to smother or drive out a chigger is a waste of time and polish. Odds are the chigger is already gone. A good shower usually washes it off. The itch, however, may last a week.
The itching is caused by your body's reaction to the spit, the bite and the damage to your skin. (A tiny scar tube forms.) Anti-itch ointments can help.
By the way, chiggers are mites (like ticks). And they also bite birds, reptiles, small mammals and even insects (like me). The tiny larvae — only 1/120th of an inch — are what do the biting. They're hard to see, but you know when they're there!
Oo, I feel itchy all over.

Well Preserved

The Well Preserved news column is prepared by Lancaster County Cooperative Extension. It includes food preservation information and questions received in the office.

Preserving Corn

With names like Temptation, Delectable, and Bodacious, who wouldn't want to give these popular sweet corn varieties a try?

All the dry weather has made sweet corn even sweeter this year. If you are planning to can or freeze corn, do so within 2-6 hours after harvest. The sugars convert to starch quickly. Extra sweet varieties will stay sweet longer.

Select ears containing kernels of ideal maturity for eating fresh. Husk corn, remove silk, trim out any insect damaged kernels. If needed, trim off ears to remove small, fibrous kernels, and wash in cool running water.

Canned corn must be processed in a pressure canner.

How long should corn be processed?

Use USDA recommended procedures to can corn. Whole kernel corn (cut from the cob at about ¾ depth) may be canned in pints or quarts. Cream-style corn (when you scrape the cob) must be canned in pint or half-pint jars only.

Recommended processing times for whole kernel corn in Lancaster County are 55 minutes for pints and 85 minutes for quarts at 11 pounds of pressure on a dial gauge or 10 pounds on a weighted gauge.

Creamed corn is very dense and needs to be processed for 85 minutes at 11 pounds pressure on a dial gauge or at 10 pounds pressure on a weighted gauge.

Why does corn turn brown when it is processed?

Sweeter varieties may turn brown when canned, especially when processed at 15 pounds pressure. The sugars tend to caramelize. It is safe to eat if properly processed. Can a small amount and check for color and flavor before processing a large amount.

How long should sweet corn be blanched for freezing?

Blanch ears in boiling water for 3 minutes for whole kernel, 4 minutes for cream style and 7-11 minutes, depending on the size of the cob, for corn-on-the-cob. Cool in several changes of ice water and drain.

For additional information on preserving corn contact your local Cooperative Extension office and ask for the Let's Preserve Corn publication.

If you have food preservation questions, a home economist is available to answer questions on Wednesdays 9:00 a.m.- 1:00 p.m. Call (717) 394-6851 or write Penn State Cooperative Extension, Lancaster County, 1383 Arcadia Rd. Rm. 1, Lancaster, PA 17601.

Paul Hostetter Heads 170 FFA Chapters With 8,000 Members

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

HOLTWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — As president of the state FFA, Paul Hostetter heads an 11-member leadership team that guides 8,000 members.

Interacting with so many different personalities is a daunting task, but the personable 18-year-old faces the challenge with confidence.

"The advantage of growing up the youngest of four children is that it rounds off my rough edges. They (siblings) are quick to tell you if you're annoying. It teaches you to be accepting of others and to get along with almost everyone," Hostetter said.

Born on a 250-acre farm, Hostetter became immersed in hard work at an early age. Now the energetic recent high school graduate handles a construction job in addition to working on the family farm, operating a contract gilt operation, and heading the FFA.

The son of Jim and Mary Louise Hostetter credits the farm work ethic with teaching him to do quality work.

On the family's 250-acre farm, about 170 acres are crop-farmed, which Hostetter helps plants and harvest. They have about 10 Angus, which graze the meadow.

For many years the family had a 100 sow-to-finish operation. Recently, they scaled down because the buildings needed updated. Instead, Hostetter and his brother Robert contracted with a feed company to raise gilts. The two brothers share responsibilities, and their dad and uncle fill in.

Hostetter said his many achievements are a reflection of the strong influences his family, church, and school has had on him.

"When I was younger, my dad told me, 'if you ever have the opportunity to better yourself, don't turn it down.' His advice still rings in my ears," Hostetter said of his participation in many different experiences.

His mom said that from little on up, her son has always displayed a unique characteristic. "He is my reasonable child. He'd listen intently to conversations and then propose a solution. He is a strategist. He is flexible, has a great personality, and makes friends easily."

Hostetter's older brother Jim had been a charter member of the LMH FFA established in 1993. His involvement sparked Hostetter's interest in FFA. When he became a high school freshman, a vision to become a state officer formed in his mind.

Although Hostetter has a strong hands-on farm experience, he said that his involvement in FFA exposed him to other facets of agriculture. He especially enjoys business management.

Paul Hostetter of Hans Herr FFA Chapter heads the state organization with 170 FFA chapters and 8,000 members. He said, "The farm work ethic has taught me to do quality work and be responsible in getting done."

The Hans Herr Chapter at Lancaster Mennonite High (LMH) has the distinction of having two of their graduating seniors providing state FFA leadership. In addition to Hostetter, his classmate Jeremy Ranck, Christiana, was named eastern region vice president. It's rare to have two state officers from the same school.

"It's really a credit to our school. We have excellent ag teachers who are very assisting in helping us, and they challenge us (students) to push out of our comfort zones and try new things," Hostetter said of Lehman Metzler and Christopher Ochs.

For example, Hostetter said that he had not considered entering competition in the interview process until his ag teachers encouraged him. Not only did Hostetter place third in state competition but also, he said, the process has benefited him in so many situations and, he expects, will continue to do so.

Many of the FFA activities Hostetter participated in enabled him to hone public-speaking skills. He had the thrill of being part of the state team that competed in national livestock judging.

"The team worked hard and it paid off, which gave us incentive to work even harder," Hostetter said. His FFA chapter also awarded him the outstanding leader award, Dekalb Award, and Keystone Degree.

"I like to experience new things. Through FFA, I had the opportunity to travel a lot."

One of his trips was to Utah with the National Institute for Cooperative Education (NICE).

"We learned about proprietorships, partnerships, cooperatives, and corporations," Hostetter said.

His interest with numbers and the Utah conference fueled his interest in a possible career in ag business.

For one year, Hostetter is putting college on hold so that he can dedicate himself fully to being an effective president, stressing the selected theme "Soaring Above and Beyond" when visiting the state's 170 FFA chapters.

To become a FFA officer, students send in an application. If they are accepted, they participate in a three-day interview process during the FFA convention conducted on the Penn State campus.

The applicant does not have the choice for a particular office. Instead, the nominating committee observes all the candidates in group settings to determine the most suitable office for each person.

In addition to traditional requirements such as prepared and impromptu speeches, the applicants are assigned unique situations. For example, in one occasion, the candidates were handed a lollipop, utensil, and plate and told to equate it to FFA. The team members needed to discuss and conclude among themselves before presenting their final decision. They competing against the best students from FFA chapters across the state. All the candidates have leadership skills and are accustomed to taking charge. At the end of the convention, the winners are named during a rousing convention filled with anticipation.

"Opportunities in FFA are endless. The traditional tie to agriculture remains, but FFA is changing to embrace all facets of agriculture, such as floriculture, biotechnology, and public speaking," Hostetter said.

The state officer team includes six students from active farms and five off-farm. "The mix is a good example of what FFA is all about. Fifty percent of our members do not live on farms," Hostetter said.

"FFA teaches such practical skills. Those who participate are not helpless when it comes to fixing things," he said.

Hostetter was selected to attend the Pennsylvania Governor School in the year 2000. His experience during those weeks influenced him to want to attend Penn State to study ag business.

He would like to combine an ag career with pastoring. He said, "Being a Christian, I want to accept the challenge of furthering God's kingdom. I always attempt to live out the Christian life."

When his one-year term as state FFA president is finished, Hostetter would like to work six months as a guide for a hunting service, preferably in Idaho, before continuing his college studies.

FFA Discover the Power

"I couldn't have done this on my own," Paul Hostetter said of his appointment as Pennsylvania FFA president. Paul credits his parents, James and Mary Louise Hostetter, for their guidance and support in encouraging him to do his best.

Peppers Add Flavor, Color, Nutrition

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania peppers are a favorite flavor enhancing ingredient in many recipes featuring meats or other vegetables. And because they come in various shades of red, yellow, orange and purple besides the basic green, they can also add a rainbow of color. And best of all, they are a significant source of vitamin C as well.

Pennsylvania vegetable growers grow over 1,000 acres of peppers to add that extra bit of flavor to pizza, salads, stir-fries, omelets, sauces, and numerous other dishes. About 90 percent of the acreage in Pennsylvania is planted in sweet bell peppers. Less than 10 percent is devoted to the hotter varieties. Sweet bell peppers are usually sold in the mature green stage. However, if green peppers are left on the plant to fully mature, they will turn color. Most varieties will turn red, but some turn brilliant shades of yellow or orange while others become purple.

As they turn color, their sugar content increases along with their vitamin C content. Green peppers have twice as much vitamin C as oranges by weight while red peppers have three times as much plus beta carotene. Hot peppers are also high in vitamin C.

While the familiar blocky bell peppers are the most common sweet pepper, there are several other kinds that are classified as sweet peppers but that have a stronger flavor than bell peppers. This extra flavor makes them excellent additions to various dishes. Among these varieties are cubanelle, banana and pimento peppers.

There are many kinds of hot peppers grown. Probably the most common ones grown in Pennsylvania are Hungarian wax, jalapeno, cherry and cayenne. Capsaicin, the substance that makes peppers hot, is extremely pungent in its pure state. Capsaicin and related compounds are concentrated in the placenta of the pepper — the white ribs inside the pepper that hold the seeds. Thus, much of the heat of peppers can be removed if this part is cut out. It is important to wear rubber gloves or repeatedly wash one's hands while doing this to protect them. Be especially careful not touch the face or eyes during the process.

Besides adding flavor to the diet, sweet peppers can be eaten in quantities sufficient to supply significant amounts of vitamin C to the diet and help fulfill the recommended three to five servings of vegetables per day recommended by nutrition experts. Raw peppers sliced lengthwise into spears make a tasty and colorful addition to platters of other raw vegetables served with dip.

Betty Groff, noted Lancaster County cookbook author suggests these recipes for enjoying "Simply Delicious" Pennsylvania peppers this summer:

Corn, Limas And Red Pepper Stir Fry

When everyone is enjoying the outdoors, make this recipe in your wok or electric skillet or use your heavy iron skillet on the grill and prepare it outdoors — that way you can keep the heat out of the kitchen and be part of the family fun.

6 slices bacon
6 ears corn or 4 cups corn kernels
2 medium-size red bell peppers, sliced or diced
2 cups fordhook or baby lima beans
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper

Fry bacon until crisp in a large skillet. Remove and drain on paper towels. Cut the corn kernels from the cob and add to the hot bacon fat along with the peppers, lima beans, salt, and pepper; stir fry over medium-high heat until vegetables are tender but crunchy, about 8 minutes. Top with the crumbled bacon and serve immediately. Serves 6 to 8.

Variation: Substitute green or yellow beans of your choice for the limas and add other vegetables as desired.

Stuffed Pickled Peppers

Stuffed baby peppers are quite a delicacy in the Pennsylvania Dutch country. Although it takes a long time to prepare them, these peppers are both colorful and tasty. Serve on gleam crystal.

3 cups cabbage slaw
1 firm head cabbage
1 medium green bell pepper
½ cup sugar
⅓ cup cider vinegar
¼ cup salad oil
½ teaspoon salt

Syrup:
1 cup sugar
1 cup cider vinegar
3 cups water
24 very small bell peppers — green, yellow, and red

Grate cabbage and pepper in food processor. Stir in sugar, vinegar, oil, and salt until well blended.

Clean the peppers carefully. Fill with cole slaw and set upright in a deep skillet. Bring syrup to a boil in a separate pan. Pour over the peppers. Simmer, covered until peppers are tender when pricked with a fork. Ladle very gently into pint jars open end up. Fill jars with syrup and seal. Makes 3-4 pints.

Jackie's Relish

My neighbor Jackie, an excellent cook, is very adept at canning and pickling. This relish may be used as a sandwich spread, or it is equally delicious on hot dogs, hamburgers, grilled cheese sandwiches and cold meat. In the fall, green tomatoes must be picked before the first frost. This is an excellent way to use them.

6 green bell peppers, seeded
6 red bell peppers, seeded
6 green tomatoes
1 small onion
2 cups commercial mayonnaise

Syrup:
1 cup cider vinegar
1 cup water (part may be juice from the ground vegetables)
½ cup flour
1¼ cups sugar
½ teaspoon celery seed
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup prepared mustard

Clean all the vegetables carefully. Grind with the coarse disk of a food grinder. Drain well. Save all vegetable juices to combine with water for the syrup.

Blend all the syrup ingredients together in a saucepan until smooth. Bring to a boil. Add the ground vegetables. Simmer on low heat for 10 minutes. Mix in the mayonnaise and simmer for 12 minutes on low heat, stirring constantly. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal. Makes 6 pints.

Wide Variety Of Lettuces Can Be Grown

WOOSTER, Ohio — There's more to lettuce than what's found in your local grocery store.

From exotic, tangy varieties to small, intensely colored heads that fit in your hand, lettuces have a multitude of leaf shapes, head sizes, colors, textures and flavors to appeal to a wide range of consumers. And many types of lettuce can be grown in Ohio.

"Iceberg, red and green leaf, and romaine are the standard types of lettuce found in most stores," said Matt Kleinhenz, an Ohio State University horticulturist. "But the reality is consumers and some growers are not aware that many different kinds of lettuce are available - lettuces with unique characteristics that differ in nutritional value and that serve a range of uses."

Over the past two years, OSU researchers have studied dozens of lettuce varieties from Europe, Canada and the U.S. at the Muck Crops Branch in Celeryville, Ohio, and found that many are adapted to Ohio's climate and soils. The project was designed to identify varieties of field-grown lettuce that Ohio growers could produce to meet apparent increases in market demand for "specialty" types of lettuce.

The 32nd annual Lincoln American Gold Cup, Sept. 13-16, Devon show grounds, features grand prix jumping, open speed, intermediate, amateur owner and pony jumper classes, the International Jumper Futurity and side saddle classes. The Gold Cup benefits the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine and its large animal facility, New Bolton Center. Entertainment includes exhibitions, a Celebrity Dog Show, pony rides, a children's art contest and face painting. A number of antique dealers will exhibit their wares in the fair area, which features boutique shopping. For ticket information, call (610) 964-9316 or (610) 964-0550.

"Specialty" lettuce refers to lettuces that fall into one of two major categories - heading or non-heading - but possess unique characteristics that distinguish them from the usual selection found in most stores. Examples include red-leafed or red-speckled romaines, lettuce leaves shaped like oak leaves, miniature heads the color of burgundy wine, and leaves that are green on the inside and red at the tips.

The researchers are also measuring the nutritional value of the same varieties. They hope to resume the study next year.

"People are very receptive to the idea of specialty lettuce. Currently, most of the interest originates with local or specialized markets, restaurants or growers and consumers looking for something new or unusual," said Kleinhenz. "It's important for growers to stay tuned to consumer interest. Lettuce consumption, on average, has risen over the years because of a variety of products that are offered, like the bag salad.

Cool As A Cucumber

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — "Simply Delicious" Pennsylvania cucumbers are a summertime favorite at farmers' markets, roadside farm markets and at the supermarket. Their refreshing taste is due to the fact they contain mostly water although a large cucumber will provide a significant amount of dietary fiber.

Pennsylvania farmers grow over 500 acres of cucumbers each year. Cucumbers come in two major types. The larger slicing types are eaten fresh while the smaller pickling varieties are pickled. The common field-grown slicing varieties are six to nine inches long while the European greenhouse varieties can be over a foot long.

Cucumbers sometimes have a bitter taste that often can be eliminated by peeling them. Some people prefer to remove the seeds from fresh cucumbers before serving also.

While sliced fresh cucumbers are delicious served with your favorite dip, noted Lancaster County cookbook author Betty Groff offers this recipe for an inviting summer cucumber salad.

Cucumber And Onions In Dill Sour Cream

1 large cucumber
1 medium-size onion
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon cider or white wine vinegar
1½ teaspoons granulated sugar
½ cup sour cream
¼ teaspoon dried dill weed
paprika

Clean and peel the cucumber. Slice the cucumber and onion as thin as possible. Place slices in a bowl and sprinkle with the salt. Let stand at least one hour. Rinse slices in cold water and drain thoroughly. Add the vinegar and sugar to the cucumber and onions and press with hands until sugar is dissolved. Add the sour cream and dill, mixing well. Sprinkle with paprika before serving.

Quick Buying Tips For Pennsylvania Cucumbers

The Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program offers these tips when buying fresh cucumber:

- Select cucumbers that are firm, dark green and rounded to the tip, not withered or shriveled at the ends.
- Avoid cukes that are turning yellow or appear bloated — they are overripe and will have large seeds.
- Cucumbers should be kept cool and refrigerated as soon as possible to maintain their quality.

Antiques Display Ag's Progress Through The Centuries

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — The Pasto Museum served as a gathering place for young and old during Ag Progress last week.

Sam Poorbaugh explains the use of a lard press to his granddaughter, Kayla Hetrick.

The older generation eagerly told stories about items they recalled from childhood and the younger generation discovered new insights into farm progress.

Sam Poorbaugh was pleased to discover a lard press just like the one his family had used when he was growing up. Poorbaugh told his granddaughter, Kayla Hetrick, 11, about "butchering day," when the hog's excess fat — "and there was plenty" — was cut into cubes in cooked in a large kettle until "it turned into the right color of 'chitlins.'"

The "chitlins" was put into the press and pressed to remove the excess liquid and become lard.

Remembering butchering day sparked many more stories in Poorbaugh's memory. Throughout the day hundreds of visitors swapped stories of memories associated with other items on display.

For Marilouise Miller, Watsontown, the Pasto Museum display stirred bittersweet memories. Her husband, a lifetime farmer, Penn State alumni, and attendee of Ag Progress, passed away within the last two years. She donated several of the unusual ag-related items to the Pasto Museum. Some of these items were on display for the first time.

On display was a handmade ice sled that had been handed down through many generations of the Miller family.

"My husband loved ice cutting on the Susquehanna," Marilouise said as she rubbed the time-worn wood of the sled. She recalled her husband saying that a lot of farmers can't do the old-time stuff such as ice cutting."

His memories were brought to life with photographs of ice cutting. Before electricity and refrigeration, ice was cut in the winter and stored for summer.

The photographs showed how the ice was marked by a horse-drawn ice scorer, cut with an ice plow, and sawed by hand.

The ice blocks were broken apart and hauled to the farm ice house. Surrounded by straw and sawdust, the ice blocks often lasted through the hot summer months and were used to cool milk and other perishables.

Marilouise was also thrilled to see a log stamping hammer, her family had donated, on display. A log stamped with the word "sold" showed the results of using the hammer.

"I saw the hammer before but never knew exactly how it was used," Marilouise said. "My husband would be pleased to know these items and the story behind them are being preserved."

This year the theme for the Pasto display during Ag Progress was "6,000 years of small grains." A timeline on the wall described the developments in harvesting and threshing small grains. Displays of sickles, scythes, and threshing developments through the centuries attracted thousands of visitors.

The buying and selling of small grains requires weighing and measuring. Les Firth, Mercer County, displayed his private collection of grain scales.

His collection of hand-held steel scales showed different methods to measure and test grain. For example, a test weight required weighing a specific amount of grain. There can be significant differences in grain value for the same measure. Firmer, plumper grains had a higher test weight and therefore a higher value attached to it.

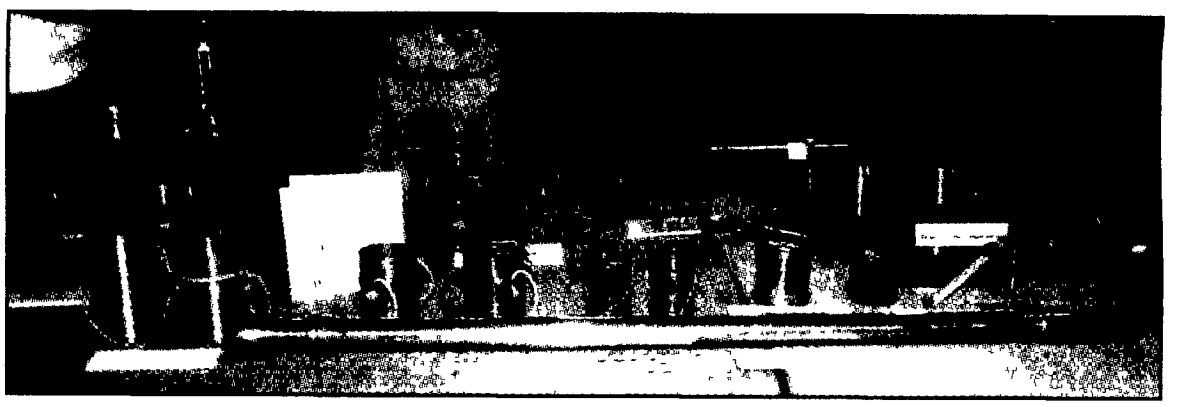
A grain probe enabled the tester to get a representive sample of all levels of grain. The sample was used to check moisture, content, chaff, and any foreign material that might be in the grain.

Firth started collecting country store scales that are unique and works of art. As time goes on, he said, he is becoming more selective in what he buys. He said, "Although I've never seen it, I want a small Buffalo one-half pint scale."

The smaller the scales, the more valuable and rare it is to find. Firth looks for scales throughout the states and in other countries. He said that many of the older and more intricate scales are from other countries because they produced grain long before the U.S.

Firth is a member of the International Society of Antique Scales. The society has an annual convention conducted in a different country each year. Next year the convention will be in the U.S.

Les Firth and his wife, Elaine, display his private collection of antique grain scales.



These scales were used in laboratories and companies for purchasing grain to determine test weights.

Up for silent bid at Ag Progress is this BMC pedal tractor that Kay Hensler, Williamsport, examines.

Seed dips (scoops) were used in country stores to dip out seeds to sell to customers.

Marilouise Miller, Watsontown, shows off the handmade ice sled that she donated to the Pasto Ag Museum in honor of her late husband, a long-time farmer.

Ancient Chinese Bronze Mirrors Something Different

You could pay $400 for a 20th century, mass-produced, Hull pottery vase, one of the current "hot" internet offerings, or $345 at auction for six ancient, Chinese Ming bronze mirrors. By now you're probably wondering why am I writing about something the average person wouldn't be interested in?

The plain fact is, they are around and in the most interesting designs. They could be framed as art. Of course you'll pay more to a dealer than bidding at auction, but they would still be quite affordable. Many were unearthed in the 1920s. Hundreds were made and treasured as far back as the Shang dynasty(1766-1122 B.C.). And, many have been unearthed in China over the centuries by rain, farming, and landslides.

In the late 19th century, when the T'ang clay figures were first unearthed, many bronze mirrors also showed up. From time to time, Chinese peasants working their fields have turned them up with their hoes.

Ancient bronze mirrors don't bear any resemblance to today's mirrors. The ones seen in most shops today are circular-shaped, without a handle and of the type made in the Han period (206 B.C. to 220 A.D.). In the center of the circle there usually is a knob.

By the very late T'ang period (A.D. 6518-907), mirrors had become highly prized articles, not only because they brought good luck—like wedding mirrors— and had other symbolical and magical functions, but also for their beautiful inlaid work, gold and silver decorations. At that time new forms and shapes were added. By the 7th and 8th centuries A.D., the backs of the "good luck" wedding mirrors were often covered with silver and inlaid with gold and stylized motifs such as a lion or winged horse.

Examples of these are in museums such as the Freer Gallery of Art, Washington, and the Metropolitan Museum in New York City.

By the 8th century mirrors were prized not only as good luck symbols but also for their beauty and new shapes that included squares.

Like everything Chinese, even the mirror's shape was a symbol.

Antique Detective

The round mirrors represented the heavens and were considered the most desirable. These were often placed in half-moon shaped stands.

In size, the mirrors ranged from less than an inch in diameter to four and five inches.

One side was always perfectly polished and often covered with silver to improve the reflection. The other side was decorated and had a button-shaped, perforated knob, so that a cord or leather could be threaded through it and attached to a belt or held with a cord.

By the later part of the Chou dynasty(500 B.C.) mirrors were buried with the deceased to shield the dead from evil spirits.

CLUES: As in any collecting field, mirrors have been reproduced. In a book on the subject, published in 1937, "Ancient Chinese Bronze Mirrors" by R.W.

Swallow, the author mentions the faking of mirrors in 1926. The book itself is a collectors' item, covered in a thin sheet of bronze, cast into the design of an ancient mirror.

There are some tests for age you can make before purchasing. They should be heavy, since the purpose was for it to survive over the ages. Thin pieces of bronze can easily be dented and damaged. The mirror should have a patina...not be brassy or shiny. That patina offers another clue. Scrape it with your fingernail. The patina should not come off easily.

Faked patinas will have a greasy feel. Experts suggest sniffing the piece. Fairly new bronze patinas will have a sharp acrid smell.

Above all, if you buy one, don't even think of polishing it.

Seasonal Dairy Is Good Fit For Family, Pastured Cows

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEEDMORE (Fulton Co.) — Ed and Sandy Swope and their three sons used to manage a milking herd of about 100 cows in a conventional free stall and milking parlor setup. In the mid 1990's they decided it was time to make a change.

It was a good living, Ed Swope said. But we had absolutely no time to do anything else.

The Swopes now run a seasonal dairy in which all of the cows freshen over about a two-month period, roughly March and April. This allows all of the cows to go into their dry period in mid January, giving the Swope family about a month and a half break from milking.

The clustered calving also matches the time of peak pasture production with the high point in the cows' milk production.

Ed and Sandy Swope of Merotal Farm in Fulton County switched from a year-around confinement dairy operation to a seasonal, pasture-based approach in 1999. They are shown with neighbor girl and "horsehand" Chelsey Berkstresser. The Swopes have three sons, ages 12 to 21, who also help on the farm.

Careful Planning Results In Pasture Producer Award For Byerly Brothers

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

LEWISBURG (Union Co.) — When Don and Jeff Byerly decided to implement an intensive grazing system six years ago they had three goals in mind — none of which was receiving a statewide award. But careful planning, implementation and management of their permanent pastures earned these brothers the 2001 Outstanding Pasture Producer Award which they accepted recently from the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council.

Our goals were to change highly erodible ground from cultivated row crop production into permanent pasture to extend the grazing

PFGC PRESIDENT'S CORNER

Duane F. Pysher
Grassland Management Specialist
Natural Resources Conservation Service

Hello from your president as well as all of the board of directors of the PFGC.

We recently conducted one of our regular board of directors meetings in order to conduct and carry out the business of PFGC. At that meeting we discussed many important issues, one of which was the 2001 summer picnic.

This annual event brings forage producers and leaders from across Pennsylvania together in an informal atmosphere to enjoy a fun filled evening highlighted by good food and very pleasant surroundings at Evergreen Farms along the beautiful Spruce Creek.

Don't forget to send in your reservation and money as soon as possible so you don't miss out. I will be handling reservations this year as Dick Hann will be taking a well deserved vacation. I am looking forward to seeing you there.

One of the other items we discussed was the fact that for years PFGC has had a line item in the budget for sponsorship of local forage meetings and field days.

In the 2001 budget we have continued that same line item. I asked board member Craig Williams to serve as chairman of the Research and Education Committee. Part of

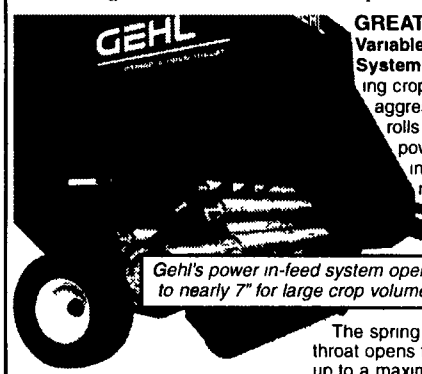
ROUND BALERS

Featuring the ALL-NEW Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System



Gehl's power in-feed system opens to nearly 7" for large crop volume

GREAT BALING STARTS HERE
Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System Here's how it works The incom-ing crop is pulled off the pickup by the aggressive action of two power in-feed rolls – a 6-inch-diameter pivoting power in-feed roll on top and and 8-inch diameter fixed power in-feed roll on the bottom

The top pivoting power in-feed roll rides over the crop as it is pulled into the bale chamber An extension spring keeps the toproll under constant downward force

The spring tension increases as the variable throat opens from a minimum of 3/4 of an inch up to a maximum opening of nearly 7 inches The constant downward force of the pivoting upper powered in-feed roll, in combination with the fixed lower in-feed roll both turning inward pnches the crop and forces it into the bale chamber The stripping roll strips crop off the belt and forces it down to the incoming crop Adjustable scrapers on the stripping roll and pivoting roll eliminate buildup

80" Wide Pickup with Two Gauge Wheels with Hyd Lift and with Steering director and Monitor

THREE-BALL TWINE BOX. Gehl balers are designed to keep you going all day long with six-ball twine storage. They're located in full-size doors that open to provide easy access to baler components like an optional chain oiler system or the Total Density Control adjustments

GAUGE WHEELS. Allow the pickup to follow field contours while keeping tines out of the dirt. That saves wear and tear on the pickup and means less dirt in your bale. Gauge wheels are standard equipment with the wide pickup and an option with some others.

BELTS. Deluxe balers feature chevron belts (pictured above) with heavy duty, plate-type belt lacing. The belts ar e 6-1/2 inches wide for closer spacing between belts and less space between the belts and side sheets. Belts are configured in a staggered pattern to minimize trash build-up.

THE NEW STEPLESS DRIVE TECHNOLOGY, IS ONLY AVAILABLE IN THE INGENUITY OF A

has occurred in the engineering of tractor design. It will change the way you work.

Cutting-edge engineering has blended the efficiency of powershift and versatility of hydrostatic technology.

an infinite selection of speeds with no shifting. Engine potential is maximized, giving you the exact working speed you require and not just something "close enough". Productivity rises noticeably. Fuel consumption drops.

plus hydraulics are now controlled through a joystick linked to the on-board computer. All the power and control is in a slight movement of your wrist. Power that ranges from 72 to 240 PTO horsepower.

combine to make this tractor your secret weapon for a much more profitable and comfortable working day.

But it will have to be a FENDT. No other tractor in North America offers this amazing technology.

Proudly Selling and Servicing Case IH Combines Since the Very Beginning.

HOOBER INC. introduced Case-IH Rotary Axial-Flow Combines to the East in 1977. Over the past 25 years we have proudly sold and serviced over 800 combines to satisfied eastern farmers. Our experienced service technicians work solely on combines, and Hoober modifications make Axial-Flow combines even more productive in tough eastern field conditions. The simple truth is, Case IH Rotary Axial-Flow combines outperform the competition where it matters most...in the field. And over that same period, no other dealer in the East has sold more Rotary Axial-Flow combines to satisfied customers than Hoober, Inc.

Call Hoober today and celebrate 25 years of Rotary Axial-Flow technology with the dealer that has been there since the very beginning.

SELF-PROPELLED FORAGE HARVESTERS

High quality and high performance in every chop

Super powered and fuel efficient, John Deere Forage Harvesters help you get the most from every cut Plus, a new larger hydro gives you faster speeds and saves fuel during transport.

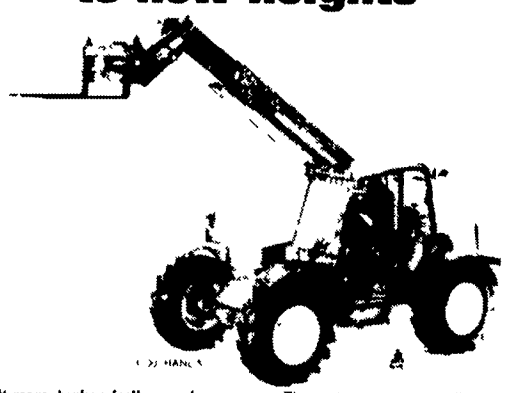
Check out the new sharpening system on the exclusive Dura-Drum cutterhead. It lets you sharpen knives in less than three minutes. And it sharpens in reverse so knives last longer.

Want more capacity? Go with a new 10-row 710 Rotary Harvesting Unit. Or choose from four other row-independent headers, two-row crop units, or three windrow pickups in sizes to fit every operation.

Get the most from your forage. See us today to learn more. Even better, ask for a demonstration.

NEW 3000 SERIES TELEHANDLERS

Take material handling to new heights



Lift more, higher, farther, and faster with the next generation of farm equipment. The all new John Deere 3000 Series Telehandler gives you the ultimate in versatility and maneuverability. Reach up to 23 feet and lift up to 6,600 pounds. And simultaneous hydraulic flow speeds up cycle times by letting you perform all functions at once.

Three steering modes will get you in and out of cramped spaces while the spacious cab offers unmatched visibility. A patented attachment system lets you make fast changeovers from the cab, so you can dig, lift, scoop, sweep anything imaginable! See us today and learn how to take your material handling to new heights.

Farm Science Review Honors Hall Of Fame Recipients

LONDON, Ohio — They've battled rain, mud and unpredictable crop conditions. They've interpreted the needs of 20 some equipment dealers at once and managed to keep everyone happy. They've consumed gallons of coffee at 6 a.m. and 10 p.m. when emergency meetings decided the outcome of the latest dilemma. And they did it all with efficient success.

Jim and Norma Trotter, both recently retired from the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center's (OARDC) Wooster campus have dedicated a combined 42 years to Farm Science Review. And even in retirement the couple plans to continue working as the organizational structure behind field demonstrations at the annual Review.

Both Jim and Norma are wholeheartedly committed to Ohio State's agricultural endeavors, and it's that commitment that makes them this year's Farm Science Review Hall of Fame inductees. The Review, an Ohio State University event, runs Sept. 18-20 at the Molly Caren Agricultural Center near London, Ohio.

"The Trotters have provided service above and beyond the call of duty," said Craig Fendrick, manager of the Review. "Both Jim and Norma do a tremendous job. During Jim's tenure of 20 some odd years, everything has run without a single hitch."

Jim said it wasn't always easy to keep things running smoothly — especially during the first year at the Molly Caren site. "It had rained so much the parking areas couldn't be used, so cars were parked along the roads. The field equipment had to go on a five mile detour to get to the fields, because the combines and other large pieces of equipment wouldn't fit between the cars on the road."

Neither the mud nor the detour stopped the field demonstrations, however. "It was muddy on top, but fairly dry underneath, and we were able to keep things going," Jim said.

In fact, keeping things going is what the Trotters' job is all about. "We have weather challenges every year," Jim said. "Some years things can't be planted on time and when August rolls around we're not sure if the grain is going to be dry enough to harvest. Some years a cool summer may delay crop growth so things don't mature on time, even though planting was done on schedule. The biggest challenge is making decisions late in the summer on what we expect crops to do by September."

If at all possible, the Trotters want demonstrations to commence, even though the weather may be questionable. Visitors have driven many miles to see equipment operating in the field. And thanks to new technology, they can plan ahead.

"We used to try to track storms on a weather radio, but with the Internet we can now tell more accurately what's going to happen where and when," Jim said. "We want the demonstrations to be a success — we don't want to disappoint the people."

Fendrick said it's during the most trying times that the Trotters shine the brightest. "Jim and Norma have the ability to very calmly analyze any situation that arises. They have provided great leadership to that phase of the Review," he said.

Their leadership stems from a love for the event itself and respect for each other. "We thoroughly enjoy working with people and the atmosphere at the Review," Jim said. "It's a totally different job than what we did in Wooster — a chance to get out in the field." And a chance to be farmers, Norma quipped "Norma has been a major help to me," Jim said.

Norma remembers one year when Jim got sick on Tuesday night. Norma worked with the field operations and was able to go ahead with planned activities, with assistance from Jack Bardall, Randall Reeder, Jim Karcher and Mike Lichtensteiger. The demonstrations continued and the crowds were once again pleased.

Though they'll continue their Farm Science Review duties, the Trotters have a new agenda. The couple built a house about 10 years ago and now they have the time to enjoy homeowners duties, including gardening. Travel will also be part of their retirement since their grandchildren live in California.

Jim and Norma retired so they would have more leisure time to pursue other interests, but they plan to maintain contact with OARDC and Ohio State University since the institution has played a major role in their lives. Ohio agriculture and its people are important to them, and continued active participation with Farm Science Review will allow them to stay in touch.

The Trotters will be recognized during the Vice President's Luncheon on Tuesday, Sept. 18. Jim and Norma join previous Hall of Fame inductees: Judy and Kelso Wessel, Ed Johnson, Harold Bauman, Jim Caldwell, Naurine McCormick, Francille Firebaugh, Robert Miller, Jim Utzinger, David R. Miskell, Robert L. Eby, C.L. "Lep" Lephart, Dorothy R. Friday, Paul C. Leidheiser, Thomas M. Stockdale, Ted L. Jones, William L. George, Earl W. McMunn, Roland L. Leeper, James W. Yingling, William B. Zipf, Wilbur A. Gould, Shirley A. Brooks-Jones, Marion E. Grimes, Molly Caren Fisher, Novice G. Fawcett, Dale T. Friday, Roy M. Kottman, and Thomas F. Wonderling.

The Farm Science Review, sponsored by Ohio State's College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences, takes place Sept. 18-20 at the Molly Caren Agricultural Center near London, Ohio. Tickets are $6 at the gate or $4 in advance when purchased from county offices of OSU Extension or agribusinesses. Children five and younger are admitted free. Hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Sept. 18-19 and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sept. 20.

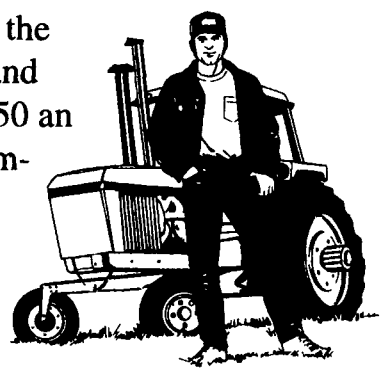
Farm real estate value



Farm real estate value in the U.S., including all land and buildings, averages $1,050 an acre. Meanwhile, the number of commercial farms with $100,000 in annual sales remained stable. Farms with sales between $10,000 and $100,000 are declining dramatically, while farms above $500,000 in sales are increasing. So-called "lifestyle" or hobby farms, with income of less than $10,000 are also on the increase.
